5 Arrested After Crime Wave Sweeps D. C. Area

Boy, 16, Admits He Slew Woman of 61; Links Self, 3 Others In Rape and Robbery

An outbreak of crime swept Washington and nearby Maryland over the weekend, leaving charges of murder, rape, holdup, robbery and theft in its wake.

Five persons, four of them youthful Negroes, are held in Maryland and Capital jails—all of them arrested within a few hours after the crimes were committed.

Arrest and confession of one of the suspects, a 16-year-old Huntsville, Md., boy, brought what Hyattsville police said was the solution to the brutal, 33-day-old slaying of 61-year-old Mrs. Annie M. Jones, of White House Heights, Md.

Traced Footprints to Home

The boy, who, police said, made a full confession, also is one of the four charged with holdup and rape of a 19-year-old Seat Pleasant (Md.) girl early yesterday morning. Police said all four had signed statements. They were identified by the girl and by her companion, Coast Guardsman Donald Beyers, 20, also of Seat Pleasant.

Arrest of the four by Hyattsville Policemen Richard A. Pearson, E. C. Cissel, Horace King and Joseph Hill rivaled detective fiction. They followed footprints leading from the car in which Beyers and his girl friend were parked to the home of the 16-year-old boy.

Three Others Involved

Others held and charges against them were:

Charles William Ross, 20, Brightseat, Md., holdup and rape.

All are held without bond for hearing April 1 in Trial Magistrate's Court at Upper Marlboro, Md.

The murder victim, Mrs. Jones, died in Prince Georges General Hospital February 12 of injuries suffered when she was attacked in a woods near her home February 7. Medical Examiner Dr. James I. Boyd said her death was due to a fractured skull, ruptured diaphragm and shock.

Lost Boy, 4, Gets Name Wrong But Parents Are Found

Four-year-old "Ernie Matissa," who spent 36 hours at the Receiving Home for Children while police sought his parents, was identified yesterday.

Police located his parents, Ernest Virts and the former Mrs. Virts, now Mrs. Clara Batista, 770 11th st. se. Virts, who lives at 422 Massachusetts ave. nw., said he left the boy with a friend last Monday night.

Ernie confused the issue by calling himself "Matissa" when he was found wandering at 10th and G sts. nw. Friday night.

ABBREVIATED DINNER—Alese Velie, 6, and James Hurst, jr., 16, whose dinner yesterday consisted of soup, gelatin, a salad and coffee or milk, because their elders observed "Sacrificial Sunday," that others with less might have more

"For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in." (Matt., 25:35.)

That brethren overseas might eat, many Washington church folk yesterday gave up a meal, or most of it.

Observing "Sacrificial Sunday" in response to President Truman's plea for food conservation, church members gave to overseas relief the money that might have gone for roast beef or chicken for Sunday dinner.

Meanwhile, churches began complying with President Truman's appeal for food conservation by canceling banquets. The fifty-fifth annual dinner of the Vaughn Bible Class of Calvary Baptist Church, set for March 29, was canceled. W. A. Minor, president of the Takoma Park Baptist Men's Bible Class, announced that the group's twenty-second annual banquet, set for Thursday, would be altered to conform to the request for "blue-plate" dinners to save food.

Typical of the folk who observed "Sacrificial Sunday" was Dr. Alfred Wesley Hurst, pastor of Cleveland Park Congregational Church, 3400 Lowell st. nw.; his wife; their sons, James, jr., 16, a student at Woodrow Wilson High School; Rolland, 13, an Alice Deal Junior High School scholar; Mrs. Mary A. Hurst, the minister's mother; and their house guests—Mrs. C. J. Velie of Baltimore, Dr. Hurst's sister, and her daughter, Alese, 6.

The family and guests sat down to a menu of soup, gelatine, salad and coffee in the Hurst home at 3418 34th st. nw.

Meanwhile, Dr. Hurst's own congregation gave $100 toward

Hoover Flies To European Food Survey

Taking Off for Paris, He Declines to Say Whether Itinerary Includes Russia

New York, March 17 (AP).—Former President Herbert Hoover, honorary chairman of President Truman's famine emergency committee, left LaGuardia Field by ATC plane today for Paris, where he will begin his survey of the continent's food needs.

Hoover left without indicating definitely whether he would include Russia in his agenda.

"I am going to every country which has asked for food from the United States. It all depends on that," Hoover said. He declined further comment and said any additional information would have to come from Washington.

Russia, along with most of Europe, has asked American assistance.

Hugh Gibson Aboard

Maj. Gen. Laurence S. Kuter, commanding the Atlantic division of the ATC, said Hoover's plane, manned by a crew of eight and including a flight surgeon, was equipped to go "any place in the world designated by Mr. Hoover."

In Hoover's party were Hugh Gibson, former Ambassador to Poland and Belgium; Frank Mason, former special assistant in the Navy Department; Maurice Pate, who directed Polish relief for the American Red Cross after World War I; Dr. Dennis Fitzgerald, director of the Office of Requirements and Allocations of the Department of Agriculture; Perrin Galpin, who assisted Hoover with food relief in Belgium after World War I; John Brown Mason and Charles Delzell, food experts, and Capt. Ivey Westmorland, serving as military aide to Hoover.

Over-night stops were planned at Newfoundland and the Azores and the plane was expected to reach Paris Tuesday.

International Board In Fateful Session

By the Associated Press

A decision, said many experts to be tantamount to a life-or-death verdict for millions of the world's hungry peoples, is expected from the International Food Control Board this week, possibly today.

The board, made up of representatives of the United States, Canada and Great Britain, is in session in Washington attempting to parcel out some 12 million tons of foodstuffs. It is faced with demands for 21 million tons, all from peoples who say failure to grant the requests means death for the hungry in whose behalf the requests were made.

This is the overall dimension of the crisis Americans are being asked to help meet. President Truman's new food emergency committee is urging the United States to cut its cereal consumption 40 per cent and that of fats and oils by 20 per cent.

The food board says that in the last analysis there simply is not enough food to meet in entirety the demands that must be met within the next few months if millions throughout Europe and Asia are to be saved from starvation.

The board has narrowed the issue to this as a starting point: At what level is feeding of former enemy

Ex-Manufacturer Falls to His Death From Third Floor

Clarence C. Archibald, 73-year-old retired candy manufacturer, fell to his death from his third floor bedroom of the Kenesaw apartments at 3060 16th st. nw., about 9 p. m. yesterday.

Archibald had been suffering from a heart ailment more than a year and had been critically ill the past few days, relatives said.

His wife, Lillian, had left the bedroom to get him some ice cream from the kitchen. When she returned, police said, Archibald was gone.

He was a former vice president of the Fannie May Candy Co., here and former manager of the Evening Star advertising bureau.

He is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Henry Wilson and Mrs. Charles E. Steidel, both of Washington.

Army Seen 500,000 Short If Draft Ends

Military Committee Members Comment On Eisenhower and Patterson Testimony

By the Associated Press

House Military Committee members said privately last night that failure to renew the draft law would leave the United States with an Army of only 570,000 men on July 1, 1947.

This is 500,000 fewer men than Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower told the commitee he would need on that date.

The comments of the committeemen were based, they said, on figures presented at a secret meeting last week at which Eisenhower and Secretary of War Robert Patterson testified on Army needs.

They explained that the army has been getting through Selective Service approximately 32,000 men monthly, and that Eisenhower's estimates were based on continuance of selective service throughout the next fiscal year.

Fear Drop in Enlistments

Should the draft law, which expires on May 15 of this year, not be extended, the Army would lose between that date and July 1, 1947, 432,000 men. This is the number of men that would be inducted during the remaining 13½ months at the current rate of 32,000 per month.

In addition, committee members said, the Army fears that there will be a sharp drop in enlistments if the draft is not continued. Many men now enlisting, they claim, are doing so because of the knowledge that they would be drafted any way. Failure to continue the draft would drive these men away from recruiting offices, committee members fear.

"The net results will be a loss of almost half a million men," said a committee member, who declined use of his name. "If General Eisenhower is to meet what he said were his minimum needs and if the draft law is not extended, it will mean that 500,000 men who should be dismissed because of long service by July 1, 1947, won't get out by that date, or our Army will drop to a dangerously low point."

Meanwhile 26 House members called on Congress to get the draft issue settled.

Special Inquiry Proposed

They proposed a special study by a joint Senate-House committee to track down answers to these vexing questions:

1. How large an armed force is needed to keep ocupation commitments and to protect the national security?

2. What legislative changes are needed to increase voluntary enlistments?

3. Can voluntary methods insure adequate manpower, or must the draft be continued?

President Truman already has asked Congress to extend the draft beyond its May 15 expiration date. Army and Navy leaders have supported him. Both Senate and House Military Committees have conducted hearings, but have not yet recommended action.

Will Offer Resolution Today

The views of the 26 lawmakers—half Democrats and half Republicans—were outlined in a statement issued by Representatives Hays (D., Ark.) and Clifford P. Case (R., N. J.).

The two, who said they had been authorized to speak for all 26, announced they would introduce a resolution today to accomplish their purpose.

Mabel Boardman Dies at 85; Red Cross Leader 46 Years

Coronary Thrombosis Causes Death of Famed Humanitarian

Miss Mabel Thorp Boardman, whose efforts as a founder and leader of the American Red Cross lifted her to an honored place among the world's great humanitarians, died at her home last night of coronary thrombosis. She was 85 years old.

Miss Boardman suffered a heart attack Friday at her home at 1801 P st. nw. A second attack yesterday afternoon caused her death at 8:30 o'clock last night. A sister, Mrs. Florence Keep, was at her bedside.

For 46 years Miss Boardman devoted her life to aiding those whose plight bound the people of the world together.

Miss Boardman was a member of the central committee of the Red Cross for 40 years. In all these years of Red Cross work, she was decorated by the Kings of Sweden and Italy, the Emperor of Japan, and the governments of France, Portugal, Serbia and Chile.

Her vitality even after she passed 70 was such that she kept four secretaries busy daily. Her enthusiasm for the Red Cross was unbounded.

Born in Cleveland, Ohio, October 12, 1860, Miss Boardman was a descendant of Gen. John Mason, a famous Indian fighter, a great-granddaughter of Elijah Boardman, a Senator from Connecticut, and a granddaughter of the founder of Yale University's Sheffield

As a young woman, she visited in Germany where an uncle, W. W. Phelps, was United States Minister. On her return she became interested in the work of the Cleveland Children's Day Nursery and in Washington's Children's Hospital.

In 1900, Miss Boardman started work to shape into an international body the small, still loosely knit group organized as the American

Troubled Waters

London, March 17 (U.P.).—Reliable sources said tonight Russian experts were conducting secret negotiations with the Iranian government for oil concessions, and press dispatches reported that a revolutionary outbreak in the capital might be imminent.

Press dispatches reported Iranian army reinforcements were moving into the capital, but they did not make it clear whether pro-Russian Premier Ahmad Qavam es-Sultaneh or anti-Russian army leaders were moving them.

The dispatches said Qavam was taking extraordinary precautions to guard against a revolutionary coup. At the same time diplomatic sources here believed that Qavam, while trying to give the appearance of opposing Russian demands, was secretly negotiating oil concessions with the Soviet Union.

British Proposal Studied

It was added that the Iranian government was studying a proposal made by Sir Reader Bullard, retiring British Ambassador, to refer the question of Iranian oil resources to the United Nations.

This plan, it was asserted, has been forwarded to Iranian Ambassador Hussein Ala in Washington for his opinion on the advisability of submitting the economic aspect of the Russian-Iranian dispute to the U. N.

Dispatches indicated a belief that an outbreak by the left-wing Tudeh Party, or Azerbaijan Separatists or even the army, might be near. Diplomatic quarters expected a climax within a few days, certainly before the United Nations Security Council meets in New York a week from tomorrow.

Diplomatic sources agreed that any Soviet troop movements in Iran were designed solely to force that country to give Moscow the privilege of exploiting oil and not to threaten Turkey.

Russia's goal, informants said, was believed to be what the Russians might call an "agreed settlement" of the oil question and, at the same time, other Russian-Iranian problems in time to stave off any further action by the U. N.

Informants expressed belief it was Russian pressure which led Iran's war minister, Gen. Ahmed Ahmedi, to disclaim an interview in which, he was quoted as saying Iran would bring to the attention of the U. N. the continued presence of Russian troops in Iran.

Navy Fund Cut For Housing, Ploeser Says

Asserts Proposed Slash Would Force Scrapping 100 Ships

By the United Press

The Budget Bureau was charged last night with seeking to "scuttle the fleet" by attempting to provide 800 million dollars for housing subsidies at the expense of the Navy.

The charge was made by Representative Walter C. Ploeser (R., Mo.) member of the House Appropriation Committee, who said that 260 million dollars of the proposed cut in Navy outlays for 1947 fiscal year since had been restored by the President.

"But the Navy's needs will still be short 600 million dollars if the Appropriations Committee upholds the Budget Bureau and I don't think it will," he said. He added that responsibility for the initial cut belonged to the White House, of which the Budget Bureau is a part.

First Estimate Was 6 Billions

According to Ploeser, who held a number of weekend conferences with naval officials, the Navy originally figured on a $6,300,000,000 budget. It finally decided it could get along with five billion dollars and presented these estimates to the Budget Bureau.

"The Budget Bureau tentatively approved the estimate," he said, "and then the Administration came along with its housing program and decided it needed $800,000,000 for subsidies. So the Budget Bureau told the Navy it would have to take that amount from its hide. That left the Navy with $4,200,000,000. Subsequently, the White House decided it could get along with $600,000,000 in housing subsidies and gave the difference back to the Navy."

Ploeser said that as the Navy's

Chinese Army Finds Mukden Plague-Swept

Manchurians Greet Troops on Arrival; Order Is Restored

Peiping, March 17 (AP).—Divisions from two Chinese government armies, some of them United States trained and equipped, were reported today to be in strife-torn Mukden, where an outbreak of bubonic plague added to the trials of Manchuria's greatest city.

The army newspaper Ho Ping Pao said the new Sixth Army, one of China's most modern, rolled into Mukden Saturday, proudly displaying its American gear, and was given a joyous welcome by citizens.

A delayed dispatch from Mukden said the 25th division of the battle-seasoned 52d Army also was scheduled to enter the city Saturday as part of the government force moving into Manchuria to take over in the wake of the departing Russians.

The troops entered a city of two million population suffering from looting, from disrupted power service and from rat-bourne plague which medical authorities said already had taken from 20 to 30 lives. While medical authorities took emergency measures, the government garrison struggled to restore light, heat and water to the suffering population.

Progressives In Wisconsin Rejoin GOP

Convention Heeds La Follette's Advice After Stormy Session

Portage, Wis., March 17 (AP).—Wisconsin Progressives, after a stormy meeting in which they fought out their political future at a State-wide party conference, voted today to rejoin the Republicans, from whom they cut loose in 1934 to form their own organization.

The vote was 284 to rejoin the Republican Party, 67 to retain the Progressive label and 51 to join the Democrats.

The vote came after Senator Robert M. La Follette, one of the State party's founders 12 years ago, told the delegates that he was convinced that the Republican Party of Wisconsin "offered us the best opportunity of advancement of progressive principles."

Sees Democrats Stalled

"We can go into the Republican Party," he said, "and make the same fight that we have been doing as Progressives."

The Senator added that Wisconsin had always been a Republican State and had gone Democratic only once in 50 years.

Decision to abandon the Progressive Party label came after five hours of debate in which 42 delegates took the floor to discuss the party organization.

"The Democratic Party has able, liberal men whom I have worked with," Senator La Follette said, "but the party is now stalled on dead center. It can not act with sufficient unity to meet its problems and many of these able liberal leaders are resigning in disgust."

Rubber Cache, Plus Synthetics Seen U. S. Need

Policy Committee Points to Safety of Nation in Wartime

The Government's rubber policy committee recommended last night that the United States retain the nucleus of a "large and healthy" synthetic rubber industry which could be expanded rapidly if war threatens again.

It said in a report to Congress and President Truman that the Nation never again can depend on overseas sources of natural rubber and proposed that the best of its 700-million-dollar war-built synthetic industry be kept on an operational and "stand-by" basis, ready for any emergency.

Two-Year Shortage

Estimating annual rubber requirements at 900,000 tons, the committee pointed out that natural rubber supplies will remain critically short for at least two more years.

It therefore will be necessary, it said, to keep synthetic plants going at near-maximum production through 1947. After that, output should be kept at levels sufficient to supply one third of total need, or around 300,000 tons.

The committee, headed by William L. Batt, formerly with the War Production Board, and comprising representatives of nine Government agencies, favored immediate steps to transfer Government-owned plants to private industry.

It said that competition among private owners would promote further research and development and result in a cheaper product. Although more expensive than nat-

Green Sprouts Out All Over As D.C. Irish Honor Their Saint

Thousands of green-bedecked Washington Irishmen—sons of the Old Sod by blood or choice—yesterday trekked to their churches to honor their patron saint.

Still more thousands, whose Celtic fervor was undampened by the day's rawness, gayly paraded the city's streets throughout the day—displaying in fine Irish style their green carnations, neckties, bonnets, coats and bandanas—in fact, anything and everything that would clearly align them with the "great man who rid Ireland of the snakes."

Nearly every home in the town was brightened by a "touch of green." Maybe it was the shortage of meat, but the staunchest Irish swore it was the mint jelly that brought lamb to so many family tables.

Understandably, "r's" rolled a bit thicker as heritage-proud heads of families reared back from "the good things of life" to regale, in marked brogues, open-mouthed youngsters with fabulous tales of the accomplishments of the "greatest Irishman ever to draw breath."

It was at St. Patrick's Church at 10 o'clock mass that typical loyalty to things Irish—and piety for things good—was manifested.

The Ancient Order of Hibernians and their ladies' auxiliary, who turned out in a body, helped to fill the church at 10th and G sts. nw. to the point where latecomers had to crowd vestibules or stand in the streets.

They heard Msgr. John J. Russell, pastor of St. Patrick's, extol the glories of St. Patrick.

They heard him say that "America today stands strongly in need of another St. Patrick—to rid our country of the same element of

51 Per Cent in D.C. Oppose Loan to Britain; Those in Favor of It Total 33 Per Cent

Fifty-one per cent of District residents oppose granting the proposed loan to Great Britain, while 33 per cent favor it.

This was revealed by The Post Poll, which asked a cross section of local residents:

"President Truman has recommended to Congress that the U.S. loan 3¾ billion dollars to help Great Britain get back on its feet. Would you approve this loan?"

The results:

|---|---|
| Approve | 33% |
| Disapprove | 51% |
| No opinion | 16% |

The interviews revealed that District residents generally do not expect the loan to be repaid in full.

District residents also were asked:

"If we lend this money to Great Britain, do you think we will be repaid in part, in full, or not at all?"

They replied:

| | Per Cent |
|---|---|
| Believe Britain will repay in full | 10 |
| Believe Britain will repay in part | 34 |
| Believe Britain won't repay at all | 40 |
| No opinion | 16 |

Belief about repayment constitutes the greatest difference between those who approve and those who oppose the loan.

Of those who believe Britain will repay in full, 70 per cent approve the loan, while 13 per cent oppose it. Of those who believe that Britain will not repay at all, 13 per cent approve the loan, while 77 per cent oppose the loan.

Senators Are Almost Even on British Loan

Twenty-one Senators now favor British loan, 20 are opposed, and 52 still are undecided, according to an Associated Press poll. (Story on Page 3.)

That the United States should take care of its own people first is the most typical reason given by those who disapprove the loan: "We can't afford it." "Charity begins at home."

Another frequently stated reason for disapproving the proposed loan: "England didn't repay her debt to us after the last war, and she won't repay this one."

Other local residents opposed to the loan say: "We've done enough for England already." "England should help herself if she's in trouble." "She should get help from her colonies."

Most local residents who approve making the loan state that the assistance to Britain would be an insurance against world and American economic depression: "We can't have world prosperity if England collapses."

Other Washingtonians favoring the loan believe Britain's need for assistance is great and the United States should make the loan on humanitarian grounds.

Still others look upon the loan as an appropriate repayment for Britain's sacrifices and courage in the war: "She fought part of the war alone, and this would repay her and show her our gratitude."

Thirty-eight per cent of local men approve the loan, but only 28 per cent of women do. In the college-educated group, the loan is favored by 47 per cent. Twenty-three per cent of those with only primary schooling approve.

Opinions of District residents as revealed by The Post Poll parallel closely the results of recent national polls. Both the National Opinion Research Center and the American Institute of Public Opinion found pluralities opposed to the loan.

U. S. Ship Breaks Up Off Scotland; 54 Are Rescued

Campbelltown, Scotland, March 17 (AP).—Thirty-nine crew members and 15 passengers were rescued today from the American-bound ship Byron Darnton, after a 14-hour battering by heavy seas on a reef off Sanda Island in the Firth of Clyde.

Passengers included seven Norwegian girls with scholarships in United States schools, two American officers, two Norwegian officers, an American serviceman's bride, two men students and a woman tourist.

The 7176-ton American-owned ship grounded at midnight in a fog as she headed for the Atlantic out of the Firth of Clyde. An SOS brought half a dozen rescue vessels. A Campbelltown lifeboat took the personnel off just before the Darnton broke in half.

Red Sentry Detains U. S. Envoy in Tabriz

Gear Goes First

Red Troops Pack to Quit Danish Isle

Roenne, Bornholm, March 17 (AP). Truck convoys and narrow gauge railway trains loaded with departing Soviet troops and equipment rolled into this port city today as the Russians began evacuating the strategic Danish island of Bornholm at the entrance to the Baltic Sea.

The methodical evacuation of the 241mile-long island off Sweden's southern tip began a little more than 10 months after Russian forces seized it from the Germans and thus created Denmark's most delicate wartime problem.

Foreign Minister Gustav Rasmussen said yesterday the Russians had agreed to evacuate the island after assurances from Denmark that the Danes would control the island "without the help of foreign powers."

Troops and equipment were being placed aboard five freighters in Roenne Harbor, and Col. N. E. Christensen, commander of Danish troops on Bornholm, said Danish general staff officers would arrive tomorrow to arrange for the official relief of Russian troops.

Only equipment, mostly ammunition, and a small number of troops were reported shipped here today. In numerous camps Russian troops were busy packing their equipment. At one camp the soldiers removed pictures of Lenin and Stalin from signboards marking the entrance.

Red army patrols in the streets of Roenne were doubled, and the whole downtown area near the harbor was barred to civilian traffic, apparently to protect the embarking troops from the curiosity of the islanders, who crowded everywhere to watch the long awaited withdrawal.

Urge U. S. to Leave Iceland

Stockholm, March 17 (U.P.).—Two Swedish newspapers today called on the United States to withdraw its troops from Iceland, terming continued American occupation of the island as "the last obstacle to the Nordic countries' return to normal life."

In Copenhagen, the radical Danish newspaper Politiken and the conservative Berlingske Tidende also expressed confidence that the British troops would soon evacuate Denmark. No American forces are stationed there.

Troops Called Back

Tehran, March 17 (U.P.).—An armored column of 1500 Iranian troops has been recalled to Tehran from Garmsar, it was disclosed today amid reports that the Soviet garrison at Karaj, 20 miles northwest of Tehran, has been increased to 2700 men.

The Iranian column was one dispatched to the east 10 days ago to take over three cities reportedly evacuated by the Russians. The column was halted by the Red army, however.

Although it was pulled back to the capital as the Russians massed new troops at Karaj, authoritative sources said that no additional military precautions had been taken.

Freed Later With Russian Apologies; No Significance

By the Associated Press

American Vice Consul Robert Rossow was stopped by a Russian entry in the Iranian city of Tabriz last Friday and held for half an hour at a Red army command post before his identity was established and he was released, the State Department reported last night.

The local Soviet consul general expressed his regrets over the incident and officials here said that the State Department attaches "no significance" to it.

Rossow is in a key position, since Tabriz is the vital communications center through which virtually all Russian military movements southward in Iran must pass.

Climax Looms

Meanwhile, the general Iranian situation appeared quiet on the surface, but officials here believe events are boiling up toward a climax some time next week, with Russians putting increasing pressure on the Tehran government to give way to their demands.

One report in official information from the Iranian capital is that a Russian diplomat, Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet diplomatic mission there, delivered a warning to Premier Ahmed Qavam Sultaneh to refrain from pressing any charges against Russia in the United Nations Security Council, meeting in New York next Monday.

The warning—if it turns out to be as reported and Washington officials now are generally inclined to accept it that way—puts Qavam on the spot because if he takes some action which Russian considers "unfriendly" it has an army with which to express its displeasure.

Moreover authorities here say that unquestionably there are other points on which Russian pressure is being brought to such an extent as to make the Iranian premier's position extremely difficult.

Wants Friendly Regime

These diplomats explain that Russia's immediate objective presumably is to get an Iranian government completely on its side and one which would officially welcome the presence of Red Army troops in Iran. This, in fact, is the critical question.

The Iranian problem could be solved almost in a matter of minutes if the Russians would, perhaps by some face-saving formula, begin to pull their troops out of the country. The major immediate complaint against them in both Washington and London is that they failed to withdraw their forces by last March 2 in accord with a treaty, and everything which has happened since is at the moment considered subordinate to that fact.

Why the troops are still there remains a mystery, and Russia so far has offered no reply to a direct inquiry on that point submitted by the American Government.

CHINA

founder of the Chinese Republic, both were elected to a standing committee which will consider the Manchurian situation and reorganization of the government.

The executive committee issued a manifesto declaring the determination of the government to carry out an agreement with the Communists to strengthen peace through closer friendship with the Soviet Union.

The manifesto pointed out that "strict observance of the Soviet-Chinese treaty of friendship and alliance by both parties was the first requisite for enhancement of mutual trust."

In his appeal for unity, Chiang declared:

"We should abandon preconceived notions and take into account China's future outlook as a whole and carry on until peaceful unification is achieved.

"I hope that the Communist Party, like the government, will be received with the genuine sincerity and good will of our friends and abide faithfully by agreements reached without resorting to irregular actions and introducing fresh irrelevancies."

Hopes for Goals

Chiang said he believed that the mission of General George C. Marshall, President Truman's special envoy, can be fulfilled on time. He added:

"General Marshall's success is the success of President Truman's policy, and the success of our government's policy for peaceful unification."

It was announced meanwhile that China's critical financial and economic situations are expected to be solved shortly by new government measures described as "drastic and revolutionary."

BOARDMAN

Red Cross by Miss Clara Barton.

Miss Boardman was named to the board of incorporators of the Red Cross in 1900 after friends submitted her name for the post without her knowledge. Three years later, her driving, energetic work had aroused interest of several leaders in Washington to reorganize the group.

With aid from John W. Foster, former Secretary of State, and of William Howard Taft, then Secretary of War, she drafted the outlines of the charter granted by Congress in 1904.

The office building of the new national organization—on 17th between D and E sts. nw.—was built with a fund of $1,000,000 which Miss Boardman raised through a Federal appropriation and through private subscription.

This building was dedicated as "a memorial to the heroic women of the Civil War."

When members of the fund committee objected to buying all the land for the national headquarters, Miss Boardman said:

"If we ever have a war, we'll need that space for additional quarters."

Foresight Vindicated

The statesmen laughed, but within five years there were four large and several small buildings on the site around the main building. They proved to be hardly sufficient.

In 1919, Miss Boardman became national secretary of the Red Cross. She was a United States delegate to the eighth International Red Cross conference in London; to the ninth conference held in Washington; to the fifteenth and the sixteenth, held in Tokyo and London respectively.

She turned down at least one bid to become national chairman. When President Taft asked her to take the job she declined.

"The public has more confidence in men executives," she said.

Honors were showered on her at every turn. She held honorary degrees from Yale, Western Reserve, Smith College, George Washington University, and Converse College.

Appointed a District commissioner in 1920 by President Wilson, Miss Boardman served for nearly three years. She knew nearly every Presidents since Taft, and President Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, Hoover and Roosevelt had commended her work.

On January 1, 1944, almost a thousand Washingtonians attended a testimonial luncheon held for her at the Statler. Eleven months later she was awarded the Red Cross Distinguished Service Gold Medal.

The citation accompanying this award commended her for being a "Leader of men and women in the vision of the Red Cross as a national and international instrumentality of service."

In 1942 she was also awarded the Cosmopolitan Club's Distinguished Service Medal for 1941 for "outstanding and unselfish service to her community."

Through the years, Miss Boardman kept office hours and accepted no salary. To study Red Cross groups in Europe, she paid her own expenses.

She raised personally more than two million dollars for the Red Cross, and watched it grow from a single room into stately marble structures, for which she drew interior plans.

Over all kinds of objections, she put Red Cross workers in uniform. Following a suggestion of Miss Emily Bissell, Miss Boardman initiated the Red Cross Christmas seal sales to aid tubercular persons.

Red Cross nursing service, first aid training programs and life-saving instruction and service were Miss Boardman's creations.

Soon after Charles Evans Hughes became Chief Justice, he remarked to Miss Boardman at a dinner party about a disastrous cyclone which struck three Southern States the day before.

He said he had read about the storm in a newspaper which carried pictures of Red Cross rescue work. He asked:

"How did you get there so fast?"

"The Red Cross doesn't have to get there any more," she smiled in reply, "It is there."

Miss Boardman was an Episcopalian. She was a member of the Chevy Chase Club and the Sulgrave Club in Washington; the Colony Club, New York City, and the Murray Bay Club of Murray Bay, Canada.

Her account of her experiences in the first years of World War I was published in 1915 in her book "Under the Red Cross Flag."

In addition to Mrs. Keep, Miss Boardman leaves another sister, Mrs. Murray Crane of Dalton, Mass., who was reported on her way to Washington last night.

Miss Boardman's Loss Is Called 'Irreparable'

Miss Boardman's death was termed "an irreparable loss" by J. Clifford Folger, District Red Cross chairman.

"She was the founder and most active member of the District chapter. Its first meeting was held in her house on Dupont Circle in 1905," he said. "Under her inspiring leadership, it grew from less than a dozen members to nearly half a million.

"Within the past few days, she spoke at Constitution Hall and there made awards to heads of service with moving words. For nearly half a century she had taken the lead in both national and local affairs of the Red Cross. Her life has been the living symbol of the humanitarian spirit underlying the organization of which she was so much a part.

"Her name is known throughout the world wherever the name of the Red Cross is known. No one in this country has played a greater role or has done more to promote its healing influence."

Miss Boardman Won Tribute Of World Great

When William Howard Taft summed up the career of Miss Mabel Thorp Boardman he used words that will stand as a monument to this great woman whose life was dedicated to the relief of suffering all over the world.

"We cannot think of the Red Cros without thinking of Miss Boardman, and we cannot think of Miss Boardman without thinking of the Red Cross."

Her white curls piled high in old time fashion, her erect, forceful carriage, reflected the graciousness and feminine wisdom that enabled her to follow her dreams determinedly until they became realities for millions of human beings who suffered in war or peacetime disasters.

Paid Her Own Expenses

Rich, the friend of Presidents and royalty, she needed no social worker's prestige. She did not work for money, but used her own personal funds for the merciful journeys which took her all over the world.

Miss Boardman has been described as "magnificently Victorian."

Her carefully selected hats were famous in the Nation's Capital. She wore her hair in the pompadour style of the 1890s—a style which the cycles of fashion have brought back.

She looked so much like England's Queen Mary that the Prince of Wales, in his 1919 visit to Washington, started in surprise when he met her at a reception in his honor in the old British Embassy.

At her office in the National Red Cross Building on 17th st. nw., Miss Boardman often wore pearls and diamonds as part of her business costume. But it was an unostentatious part of her dress—she had an old-fashioned liking for jewelry, traditional accessory of the grand lady.

When, in 1900, Miss Boardman's name was placed on the rolls of incorporators of the Red Cross, it was without her knowledge. Washington society wondered and then gave its heartfelt admiration to Miss Boardman as she organized and welded the small group into the powerful influence for mercy it now is.

Was Toast of Kaiser's Officers

She had just returned from Germany, where her uncle, W. W. Phelps, was United States Minister.

Miss Boardman was the toast of the Kaiser's young officers, and was often feted at balls in which she appeared in long satin trains. But even then she demonstrated the practical side of her mind, when she warned other American women upon her return of the need for warm things under the shimmering evening frocks of that day.

In the victory parade of 1917 Miss Boardman startled high military and State officials by having the District chapter of the Red Cross appear in uniforms which she designed. This convinced the objectors to a uniform that Miss Boardman's argument was strong enough, and worthy of standard dress.

Roosevelt Group To Honor Memory At Dinner April 12

New York, March 17.—Former asociates and leading supporters of Franklin D. Roosevelt will honor the later President's memory at a national citizens Political Action Committee dinner here on April 12—the first anniversary of his death—it was announced today by Henry Morgenthau, jr., chairman of the dinner committee.

Henry A. Wallace, Secretary of Commerce, and Justice Hugo L. Black, the late President's first appointee to the Supreme Court, will be the principal speakers. Others will include Miss Frances Perkins, Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York; Herbert L. Lehman, retiring director general of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration; Dr. Frank Kingdon, biographer of the former President and chairman of the PAC steering committee, and Orson Welles, a PAC vice chairman.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., and Elliott Roosevelt head the list of honorary guests, Morgenthau said.

Russian Aims in Middle East Are Revealed by Old Events

(Following is the first of a series of six articles written by the former Chief of the Intelligence Branch of the Persian Gulf Command of the U. S. Army. Succeeding articles will be carried daily.)

By Maj. John R. Walsh

New York, March 17.—The currently oft-heard question, "What is Russia up to now?" must be more rhetorical than it is a sincere expression of curiosity when asked by presumably well-informed statesmen.

Certainly it is not difficult of answer by those aware of Imperial Russia's southward drive to implement Peter the Great's alleged testament, and by the many who witnessed Soviet Russia's preparatory moves to strike through the Middle East across Britain's sensitive and vulnerable lifeline of empire.

In this subcontinent of southwestern Asia are the trade routes, the waterways, railways and airways which afford communication and commerce between the great populations and markets of Europe and Asia.

Historical Battleground

Here for thousands of years has been the battleground of empire.

Egyptians, Assyrians, Babylonians, Chaldeans, Jews; Iranians (ancient Persia), Greeks, Romans, Byzantines, Islam, all sought domination, covering desert and mountains with civilian as well as soldier blood.

From the late tenth to early fifteenth centuries a succession of nomadic waves poured out of Central Asia, pressed on by the widening barrenness of the Asiatic heartland, conquering and destroying, looting and raping, egged always onward by the spirit of conquest and the lush gossip of ancient caravan routes.

The Ottomans, having achieved domination of Asia Minor but beset by the Byzantines and Crusaders around the Mediterranean's edges, had seen their predecessor Seljuk Turks unable to withstand a two-front war against Genghis Khan's mongols while at their backs were warlike Christians. They faced Tamourlane's fourteenth century onslaught from central Asia, and foresaw others.

To prevent espionage and communication between eastern and western enemies they closed the old trade routes. This forced the discovery of the long water passage around Africa and indirectly led to the discovery of America.

These historic events accelerated development of water-borne commerce and the newer and richer areas of discovery. It was not until the last century, with the opening of the Suez Canal and the building of Russian railways, that the Middle East was fully restored to its ancient strategic importance.

Among the waterways the Dardanelles was already an object of Russian territorial ambition, Britain and France having joined the Ottomans in the Crimean War to withhold these narrow straits from Czarist clutches.

Even before World War I the Persian Gulf and the Red Sea had become British lakes important in the cohesion of empire and Suez was as necessary to England as the Panama Canal is to the United States.

World War II placed emphasis on oil, tended to exhaust reserves in friendly hands. The war's huge cost brings extreme necessity for Britain to hold and enlarge markets. Tensions within the empire, and with commerce-producing and politically-related countries increase the value of waterways, rails and airways as cohesive factors holding British territories together.

In several places the Middle East's oil bubbles to the surface and has been burning for centuries. If unrelated to complex economic, political and religious factors—of which mention will be made in subsequent articles—the great oil reserves already tapped or known to exist within the strategic land mass would of themselves likely not kindle another world-wide conflagration.

The cost per barrel would be thus too great for practical statesmen. It would be more clearly in the interest of their countries to assign areas, as has in effect been done around the Persian Gulf, or to deal in consortium, as has been done in northern Iraq and as has been proposed in Iran.

Producing Fields

Producing oilfields are American on Bahrein Island and on the nearby mainland of Saudi Arabia; British-French-American in Iraq (with a small private interest owned by a Caucasian); and British in southwestern Iran, where their pipelines run to the Abadan Island refinery.

The Mosul and Kirkuk fields in northern Iraq send oil to the Mediterranean via pipelines crossing Syria, Transjordania and Palestine. The proposed pipeline from American fields in Saudi Arabia and on Baherin would also traverse Trans-Jordan and Palestine.

Future development is planned in several locations, past surveys having indicated large potential reserves. American companies sought development concessions in Iran in 1943 and 1944, showing principal interest in the eastern part of that country. British companies also negotiated.

We whose business it was to keep informed of what went on had already heard that the Soviets weren't bothered by trifles such as negotiated concessions. They had already surveyed and drilled in their occupied provinces across the north of Iran.

Not so much to repulse American or British companies who were willing to negotiate as if the oil belonged to the Iranian people, and would subscribe to and operate under Iranian law, the little country decided in autumn, 1944, to reject all proposals until foreign troops have withdrawn.

Iran is an historic wedge land in all this. For over 200 years her history has evolved ("clarified," as the Soviets now say) around the rivalry of Britain and Russia. At her east lies India, Britain's "jewel of empire." At her extreme northwestern corner is the kars plateau, now demanded from Turkey by the Soviets.

Thence a military aggressor can look down into the Anatolian plains of Turkey; into Kurdistan, which comprises Kurd-inhabited areas ing western Iran, southeastern Turkey and northern Iraq's oil territory; and into the Iranian plateau.

What power possesses Iran's highland plateau, basing bomber aircraft behind the ramparts of the lofty Zagros Mountains, can hold at its mercy all of the Middle East's currently developed oil areas.

Soviet demands for Eritrea bear distinct relation, for thence Italian bombers flew to Bahrein.

From this former Italian colony two or three Red bomber squadrons might surprise-raid every Middle East oil installation some morning and that afternoon land in Soviet home territory! Easier thus with Eritrea, but feasible also if in possession of Iran.

Americans know that oil lubricates commerce, drives steam vessels, flies aircraft. They best understand tangible and mechanical things.

We must not underestimate other weighty Middle Eastern factors by overemphasis about oil, so in the next article we will examine some economic and political frictions.

Italian Leftists Hope For Local Victories

Rome, March 17 (U.P.).—Voters in 68 Italian Provinces went to the polls today to choose local officials, with Leftists hopeful of making a stronger showing than in last Sunday's local balloting, the first free election since Benito Mussolini came to power.

Socialists and Communists, edged out by Premier Alcide de Gasperi's Christian Democrats last Sunday, were hoping to right the balance today. Their optimism was based largely on the fact that many communes voting today are located in the normally leftist industrial regions of Emilia, Lombardy, Piedmont and Liguria.

CIO Officials Urge Closer Soviet Accord

Eleven union officials who visited Russia appealed in a report made public by the CIO yesterday for "closer understanding and cooperation" between the American and Russian peoples.

The delegation spent eight days in Moscow and Leningrad last October. It was headed by James B. Carey, CIO secretary treasurer. The Americans were guests of the Soviet Trade Unions, which previously had sent a delegation to this country as guests of the CIO.

The CIO group's report said they were "impressed" by the Soviet trade unions and their "excellent activities" in the interest of the workers.

They said living standards in the USSR are "low compared with American standards." But they reported "substantial progress in reconstruction."

Tells How U. S. Can Help

They also saw much evidence that the Russian people are determined to raise their living standards by developing peacetime industries to produce more consumer goods.

The delegation said the United States could help by supplying machines, industrial techniques and goods of all sorts. They also expressed hope that arrangements for exchanging workers between the two countries could be worked out.

The report includes quotations from speeches by two of the CIO men at a union meeting in Leningrad.

Albert Fitzgerald, president of the CIO Electrical Workers Union, told the Soviet workers:

"You have gained friends who are going to insist that our Government do everything in its power to aid you. We've seen the price you have paid to establish freedom for all peoples of the world. We in America are determined that no force within or without is ever going to turn us against your people again."

Were Warmly Received

The delegation's report says that Reid Robinson, president of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, "paid high tribute to the democratic ideal" in his speech. It quotes Robinson as saying:

"We must break down the propaganda that you have no democracy as we have."

Besides Carey, Fitzgerald and Robinson, the CIO visitors were Allan S. Haywood, Joseph Curran, John Green, Emil Rieve, Lee Pressman, John Abt, Len de Caux, and Vincent Sweeney.

They said they were warmly received throughout their trip and given ovations when attending ballet performances. They remarked on "the universal prestige accorded labor leaders in the Soviet Union."

Visiting the Stalin automobile plant in Moscow, the Americans were told that despite a reduction in working hours, the "take-home pay" of the workers remained about the same as during the war.

The CIO delegation found the workers in this plant on an eight-hour day, six days a week, with time-and-a-half for overtime the first hour and double-time the second hour.

With regard to Soviet unions, the delegation reported: "While there are many obvious differences in the systems and governments of the United States and the Soviet Union, we found parallels in the functioning of labor unions in both countries."

Senators for Loan To Britain, 21 to 20

52 Interviewed by Associated Press Poll Are Undecided on $3,750,000,000 Plan

By the Associated Press

It's nip-and-tuck for Senate approval or rejection of the $3,750,000,000 British loan, an Associated Press poll showed yesterday.

Of 41 Senators willing to express their views publicly, 21 said they were inclined at the present time to support the credit advance to Britain, while 20 were against it.

With supporters and opponents thus almost evenly divided, it is apparent that the final decision will depend on how 52 Senators who said they were now undecided—and 3 who were not reached in the poll—make up their minds.

[The United Press said last night that its continuing poll on the loan issue showed 18 in favor and 20 inclined to favor it, as against 19 and 31 others disposed to vote against.—Editor's note.]

Republicans From East

Public support of the loan measure, on which the Senate Banking Committee may complete hearings this week, came from 15 Democrats and 6 Republicans. The Democrats thus listed represent all sections of the country, but the 6 Republicans all are from Eastern States except Senator Ball of Minnesota.

The 20 who say they are unfavorably inclined toward the loan include 10 Republicans, 9 Democrats and a Progressive, Senator La Follette (Prog. Wis.). The 10 Republicans all are from the West or Middle West, except Senator Revercomb of West Virginia. The nine Democrats all are from the South and West.

In the undecided group were 30 Democrats and 22 Republicans.

Most of the Senators now favorably inclined toward the loan said they look upon it as an economic measure that promises benefits for the United States as well as Britain.

For "Economic Peace"

Senator Austin (R., Vt.) says he thinks the "primary incentive" for the proposed credit is to "establish economic peace" that will "prevent another war."

On the negative side, the arguments are much more varied.

Senator Brooks (R., Ill.) called the credit advance "the most extraordinary agreement ever proposed between two nations." Senator Willis (R., Ind.) said he remained to be convinced that the loan will be "worth what it would cost an already debt-burdened America."

Senator Maybank (D., S. C.) said he doesn't think he can vote for the loan unless the British put up collateral to cover it.

Bilbo Talks of Filibuster

Senator Bilbo (D., Miss.) told a reporter that "If I can get some help I'll filibuster against it until hell freezes over." And Senator O'Daniel (D., Tex.) declared he would be "opposed to our Government loaning any money to socialistic, debt-dodging England even if we had the money."

The debate will get going in public again tomorrow when the Banking Committee resumes hearings.

Democrats for—Andrews, Barkley, Briggs, Carville, Downey, Eastland, Glass, Guffey, Hatch, Hill, Murray, Pepper, Radcliffe, Taylor, Thomas (Utah)—(15).

Republicans for—Aiken, Austin, Ball, Buck, Smith, Tobey—(6).

Republicans against—Brooks, Bushfield, Capper, Langer, Moore, Revercomb, Robertson, Shipstead, Wherry, Willis (10.)

Progressive against—La Follette (1.)

Undecided—(52.)

Democrats undecided—Bailey, Bankhead, Byrd, Connally, Fulbright, George, Gerry, Gossett, Green, Hayden, Hoey, Huffman, Johnston, Kilgore, Lucas, Magnuson, McCarran, McClellan, McFarland, McKellar, McMahon, Mitchell, Murdock, Myers, O'Mahoney, Overton, Russell, Tunnell, Tydings, Walsh—(30.)

Republicans undecided—Brewster, Bridges, Butler, Capehart, Cordon, Donnell, Ferguson, Gurney, Hart, Hawks, Hickenlooper, Knowland, Millikin, Morse, Reed, Saltonstall, Stanfill, Taft, Vandenberg, White, Wiley, Wilson (22.)

Washington Residents Give Their Reasons For Favoring or Opposing Loan to Britain

Washington residents whose views were recorded in The Post Poll were assured that their opinions and names would not be divulged. The citizens whose comments are quoted here specifically authorized The Post to publish their views.

Here are typical comments of Washington residents polled on the question of the proposed loan to Great Britain:

Mrs. Tholl

Mrs. John M. Tholl, 31, of 2321 Huidekoper pl. nw., told a reporter:

"I certainly approve a loan to Britain. I believe with the Russian situation as it is, Great Britain and the United States will have to stand by each other to prevent another world conflict.

"I think a loan is a matter of self-protection. Also I feel that since the United States is aiding her allies, Britain should come first. It is necessary to continue good feeling."

Mrs. Tholl, who has a 7-year-old daughter, expressed the opinion Great Britain would repay at least a portion of the loan, should it be granted.

* * * *

A strong opponent of aid to Britain, Victor B. Kaley, 28, 1226 18th pl. ne., told an interviewer:

"The British can't be trusted so far as loan matters are concerned. We have yet to see the first dollar in payment of the loan we made them previously.

V. B. Kaley

"Besides, I think we should help our own people first. We already have helped the British quite a bit."

Kaley expressed the view the British would repay no part of any United States loan. He is an employe of the Maritime Commission.

* * * *

"We can't be Santa Claus," Mrs. Floyd Shillingburg, 49, 1009 B st. ne., stated.

At the same time she expressed the fear a loan to Britain would be the forerunner of many other loans. She objected chiefly to a loan to Russia.

Mrs. Shillingburg

"The housewife, mother of two married daughters, pointed out that the loan "from the last war" was not repaid. However, she anticipated at least partial repayment of the loan now under consideration.

* * * *

Raymond Seelig, 45, a writer, of 3200 16th st. nw., was very much in favor of a loan to Britain. He explained:

Raymond Selig

"Our welfare is bound with that of Britain. I think that if Britain gets weak, we will sooner or later.

"For many years the British fleet has been a definite part of the United States force even though we haven't had a positive alliance. We've leaned on the British fleet to maintain our might in the Atlantic, and they have leaned on us in the Pacific.

"Also, I feel that the finances of Britain and the United States are complementary. The British, in addition, have the same general ideas and system of government. Theirs is based on the Magna Charta and ours is based on a Constitution derived from the Magna Charta."

Mr. Seelig said he feels Britain would repay only part of the proposed loan in money but payment in "benefits" would be complete.

* * * *

"Charity begins at home," Nathaniel C. Brown, 3320 Dent pl. nw. asserted.

He stated further:

N. C. Brown

"Living conditions should be improved here before we start lending money abroad. There are many things to be done here at home."

Chief United States project, Brown said, should be more and better housing.

Brown is the father of five children. His occupation is cook.

* * * *

A loan to Britain is one of the best ways to preserve world peace, Mrs. Anthony Schwartz, 33, of 1346 Park rd. nw., declared.

It would also help to maintain United States prosperity, the housewife stated. She said further:

Mrs. Schwartz

"I think that international trade, the freer the better, is of primary importance in preserving peace. Unless we give Britain credit to purchase here we won't be able to sell to them. We have the productive capacity—what we need is the markets.

"Even if we gave Britain the money, it would still create prosperity here."

Mrs. Schwartz is the wife of a consulting chemist and the mother of a 4-year-old girl.

9 U. S. Merchant Ships to Take 600,000 Tons Of Grain From Russia for Relief of France

Atlantic City, N. J., March 17 (AP). The United States has agreed to assign nine of its merchant ships to transport 600,000 tons of Russian grain to France, C. Tyler Wood, acting head of the American delegation at the UNRRA conference, said tonight.

Wood, an attache of the State Department's division of economic affairs, said the Russians had agreed to supply France with 500,000 tons of wheat and 100,000 tons of barley, and that the United States hoped to transport at least 100,000 tons of it from Russian Black Sea ports to Marseille, France, by April 15.

Wood expressed hope that "it will be possible" for Russia to furnish additional food supplies to other countries.

Didn't Know She Could Export

In answer to questions at a news conference, Wood said that prior to Paris dispatches the United States delegation here "had no information" that Russia was in position to export any food surpluses for relief of other countries.

Until now, the combined food boards, representing the United Kingdom and France, have been trying to meet requirements from the food surpluses of the United States, Canada, Australia and the Argentine.

In view of Russia's latest action, there is talk now among some of the 43 national delegations here that the combined food boards should be expanded to include other nations, particularly Russia, to assure fair allocation of all available food surpluses throughout the world.

Protest About London Poles

Meanwhile, Russian delegates here protested that London Poles were conducting a propaganda campaign intended to delay the return home of thousands of eastern Europeans. Their protest was made before a special committee which is outlining a program for some 900,000 refugees still living in camps for displaced persons.

The Russians said the campaign was carried on through small newspapers which originate with the old London Poles, whose unofficial leader now is Gen Wladislaw Anders, who commanded the Polish forces in Italy. They accused the newspapers of counselling against return home to nations in eastern Europe—the Baltic states, Poland, Czechoslovakia and Yugoslavia.

Wood told his press conference the United States would advocate before the UNRRA that it close up its work in Europe by the end of this year as heretofore planned. Some nations have expressed hope recently that UNRRA's work would be extended in view of the current food shortage.

Wood revealed the United States also was "considering suggesting that UNRRA close up its displaced persons camps in Europe by September 1."

Polish officials have informed UNRRA personnel they are anxious for the return home of all Polish refugees in other lands so they may be settled on the German territory given to Poland.

The Russians also are expected to protest the presence of war criminals in the camps.

UNRRA's director general, Herbert H. Lehman, has acknowledged that the camps probably do shelter collaborators, but he said the duty of screening them lies with the armies, whose work has been delayed by rapid demobilization.

Several other nations asserted that at camps for refugees in Germany the occupying armies must be held responsible for any mismanagement since the armies run those camps.

Committee debate was "conducted in a friendly spirit," one delegate said. Agreement was reached to cable Europe for more detailed information.

80% of Funds Received

Eighty per cent of the money pledged by 47 member nations has been made available to the United Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, it was announced yesterday.

This represents $2,942,451,254 of the $3,659,590,110 promised as of February 28, a UNRRA statement said.

Of the 14 invaded countries, which made contributions for administrative expenses only, all were paid up. The largest amount came from Russia, $1,750,000.

School Improvements Will Be Forum Topics

An open forum on proposed improvements for Lynnbrook Elementary School will feature the East Bethesda Citizens Association meeting at 8:15 tonight in the south building of the school.

A. Hamilton Wilson, who was architect for the present buildings of the school; Mrs. Thomas Hutton, president of the P-TA, representatives of the Board of Education and the Federal Housing Administration will participate.

peoples, principally Germans and Japanese, to be maintained? After that will come the decisions on who of other needy peoples is to receive and who is not to receive.

This week promises to be a fateful one for millions.

9 Million Tons to Be Delivered by July

Atlantic City, N. J., March 17 (AP). Approximately nine million tons of desperately needed supplies are scheduled to be delivered to 16 countries by UNRRA between March 1 and June 30, Director General Herbert H. Lehman said today.

In making public the relief organization's program, Lehman warned that acute food shortages made shipments uncertain and cautioned that the program was subject to "substantial modifications."

"It is necessary that all contributing countries make available promptly their complete second contributions of funds," Lehman said.

The program, prepared by UNRRA's central committee after a two-month review, aimed at a goal of $2,434,126,300 in supplies, mostly of European nations.

China and Poland would get the highest amounts—about 375 million dollars, representing UNRRA's total help to the two countries since going into operation. Yugoslavia was ranked third with 369 million dollars and Italy, although not a member of UNRRA, was fourth with 359 million dollars.

Other countries listed were Greece, 316 million dollars; Czechoslovakia, 241 million dollars; Ukraine, 189 million dollars; Byelorussia, 61 million dollars; Austria, 58 million dollars; Albania, 25 million dollars; Hungary, $3,333,000; Philippines, three million dollars; Dodecanese Islands, three million dollars; Finland, $2,500,000; Republic of San Marino, $30,000 and Ethiopia, $10,000.

Vienna Gets Wheat

The first shipment of United States wheat for war-ravaged Austria has arrived in Vienna.

A dispatch from the Austrian capital to headquarters of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration said last night that the shipment was the first part of 8000 tons arriving from the United States via Italy.

Oats Show Increase

The Agriculture Department reported last night that oats was the only grain crop to show a production increase last year over 1944.

The 1945 world crop of 4,240,000 bushels, though five per cent larger than 1944, was still slightly below average.

"Under normal conditions," the department said, "oats do not enter into world trade to the extent of other crops.

"With the present world grain shortage, however, some increase in the export movement is indicated for the current season."

Ottawa, March 17 (U.P.).—A nine-point program of food conservation, including encouragement for farmers to attain maximum yields and voluntary cuts in consumer use of wheat, was announced today by Prime Minister MacKenzie King as Canada's latest contribution to the easing of the world food shortage.

Appeal to Swiss Farmers

Bern, March 17 (AP).—The Swiss War Food office issued an appeal today to Swiss farmers to sow as much grain as possible this spring. A communique said: "Foreign statesmen of unimpeachable authority as well as international organizations estimate that the wheat supply for 1946 will not meet two-thirds of the world needs. Therefore, Switzerland must also do everything possible to increase her cereal production."

Peace Depends on the Success Of U. N., Baruch Is Convinced

New York, March 17 (INS).—Bernard M. Baruch, presidential adviser, is convinced that world peace must be achieved within the framework of the United Nations.

It was learned today that Baruch is opposed to international military or economic alliances outside the U. N. structure.

Baruch, a fervent disciple of Woodrow Wilson and an ardent supporter of the old League of Nations, believes that lasting peace and the U. N. are mutually dependent.

It is now known that Baruch, on his return from a presidential mission in Europe almost a year ago, strongly advised against an Anglo-American alliance.

Reported to White House

Baruch's 1945 mission to Europe was undertaken at the request of his old friend, Franklin D. Roosevelt, who died while Baruch was abroad. However, Baruch at the request of the White House wrote one of his by now famous "Baruch reports" on his observations.

In this document, Baruch pointed out that in the 30 years he, and Winston Churchill had been close personal friends he never had known the Britisher to make a "sharp or ignoble proposal." While hailing the latter's frankness and sincerity of conduct, Baruch nonetheless stressed his own disagreement with Churchill's dream of an Anglo-American alliance.

During his London visits, Baruch pointed out to Churchill that America and Great Britain could always march together under the flags of the United Nations, and that they could always sit around the conference table in concert with its member nations.

At that time he is said to have urged Churchill to view Russia with a more tolerant eye. On his return home, his report urged the United States scrupulously to carry out its international pledges and to exact the same deportment from the U.S.S.R. as the basis of mutual respect and trust.

Opposes "Piecemeal" Loans

Baruch is convinced that the economic rehabilitation of Europe, including that of Great Britain, should be treated as a whole. He is opposed to "piecemeal" loans and "piecemeal" treatment of the problem with England, France, Russia the Netherlands and Belgium.

There is no more potent factor in world peace than American production, in the opinion of the elder statesman. All-out production in this country is the answer to our own and to many major international ills. He feels there is not a moment to waste in returning to full-time production.

Several months ago Baruch urged America to take an inventory of her resources, to determine what she could afford to do for herself no less than for others. He is still convinced that such a stock-taking is a basic and vital necessity.

RUBBER

ural rubber, it added, continued synthetic production would tend to hold down the price of the imported product.

The committee pointed out that natural rubber is still vital to national security since it must be mixed with synthetics for truck and airplane tires, medical supplies and other products. It recommended that the Government build up and maintain a stockpile of natural rubber, making it available to private operators of synthetic plants.

The report emphasized that the volume of synthetic production makes unlikely any future large-scale shortage of rubber.

Chaotic economic and political conditions in the Far East make any prediction of next year's natural crop hazardous at best, it said. Once far eastern plants are back to normal operations, however, production of natural and synthetic rubbers should total about three million tons a year, compared with world consumption of around 1,500,000 tons.

Other committee recommendations:

1. Government sponsorship of research programs on synthetics and stimulation of private experiments.

2. Establishment of a national rubber supervisory body to coordinate governmental rubber policies and review the entire rubber problem.

3. A government guarantee that a certain amount of general purpose synthetic rubber will be produced and used in this country.

Chesapeake Oysters Starving, Expert Says

RockHall, Md., March 17 (AP).—Oysters on the Swan Point bar and other grounds in the upper Chesapeake Bay are dying of starvation, Alan Sellers of the State Tidewater Fisheries Commission, reported. Sellers said there wasn't enough plankton, a microscopic organism which is the oyster's chief diet.

Tydings Declares Pauley Would Have Quit if Confirmed

Baltimore, March 17 (AP).—Senator Tydings (D., Md.) said today that Edwin A. Pauley told him during Senate committee hearings on his nomination for Navy Undersecretary that he would resign the post even if he was confirmed.

The California oil man's nomination was withdrawn last week by President Truman at the appointee's request after more than five weeks of hearings.

In an address prepared for broadcast over Station WBAL here, Tydings said he thought Pauley's position "was both patriotic and unselfish." The Maryland Senator, who championed Pauley's cause in committee, asserted that an attempt had been made to "smear" the nominee because he had been Democratic National Committee treasurer.

More than two weeks before the hearings closed. Tydings said, Pauley told him "that his principal concern was to clear his good name of any reflections cast upon it; . . . that even though he was confirmed by the Senate, he would immediately resign."

Col. Ainsworth Here to Demand Rapido Probe

By the Associated Press

Col. Miller Ainsworth, a Luling, Tex., banker, and other veterans of the Thirty-sixth Division came here yesterday bent on obtaining a congressional investigation of the outfit's heavy losses in the Rapido River crossing.

"This is the only recourse besides the ballot that a civilian soldier has, so far as I know, to see that fair play is had by all," Ainsworth told a reporter. "I'll be here until the snow flies in the fall if necessary."

Ainsworth is president of the Thirty-sixth Division Association, which adopted a resolution at a reunion in Brownwood, Tex., about six weeks ago asking an investigation of the Rapido operation. A resolution also criticized General Mark Clark.

The House Military Affairs Committee has agreed to hear Ainsworth and other members of the association in closed session today. One committeeman predicted, "No further action will be taken."

Ainsworth said, however, he will insist on a full investigation.

"I think," he continued, "that Army commanders in a democracy are just as responsible to the people as politicians, and we're asking that they answer to the people for an injustice that's been done."

Ainsworth said he and Col. Carl L. Phinney, Dallas attorney, will make statements to the committee. He said two other witnesses "who are not in a position to be quoted" also are here for the hearing.

The Military Committee, members said, will be concerned only with whether there should be an investigation and will not go into tactics employed at Rapido. The War Department made a report to the committete after adoption of the Brownwood resolution and some members said they believed nothing more could be done about it.

"Was I WRONG, back in 1946!"

1. "World War II was no picnic for me. That was seven years ago, and I'll never forget how hard we all worked down at the tannery. It was no soft job. But the pay was better than I'd ever made before.

2. "We didn't spend much because many things we needed were scarce. Lots of things you could get cost more than they were worth. We made all of our own repairs around the house. So we saved up a real nest egg.

3. "Those were the days when I really learned to save. I piled up a nice bit of money in the savings account, and I bought War Bonds regularly with the extra cash. I added more life insurance, too.

4. "We needed plenty of things by the time the war was over. Some people went out and bought everything in sight before there was enough to go around. We took it easy, at first—then we weakened, too!

5. "That's how our savings went, almost before we realized it. If we'd only gone slow, we could have gotten by until things were plentiful again, and we'd still have a backlog, today. Was I WRONG, back in 1946!"

Life Insurance Companies in America

BUT IT IS STILL 1946. If we use our savings wisely now, we can help to avoid inflationary price increases . . . and at the same time maintain backlogs for the kind of future we all desire. If we spend our money carelessly now, we may look back some day with regret.

During the war, millions of Americans saved to protect their families, to educate their children, to start a business of their own, to own their own home, to retire. Today they are still following the advice of our Government, buying only what they really need until civilian goods are plentiful; buying and holding on to their Government Bonds and life insurance, and maintaining their savings accounts. Are you one of them?

Eire Wartime Policy Upheld By De Valera

Dublin, March 17 (U.P.).—Prime Minister De Valera, in a St. Patrick's Day broadcast to the United States, defended his wartime neutrality policy and said he was sure Ireland had not lost American goodwill.

De Valera said he realized what American friendship had meant to the cause of Irish freedom but that no Irishman would have dared to ask the United States to go to war on Ireland's account, and that he was sure "no American friend, who realized what he was asking, would ask us, a small nation, to go to war because America was at war."

Discussing the war years, De Valera said:

"There were those who during these years would have us here in Ireland believe that by our neutrality we had lost American goodwill and alienated the sympathy of our American friends.

"I have myself never believed that that could be so. I could never imagine the American friends that I knew expecting us to do what they themselves in similar circumstances would not dream of doing."

"If a small nation went to war it might, if it was on the losing side, be utterly annihilated," he declared. "If it was on the winning side, it has no means of insisting that the principles for which it fought and risked everything must be put into effect."

NAM to Demand End of OPA Today At House Hearing

By the Associated Press

The National Association of Manufacturers will take to Cpitol Hill today its demands for an end of Government price controls on all manufactured goods.

The NAM, attacked by Chester Bowles, economic stabilizer, as a sponsor of an "irresponsible, reckless and greedy" lobby, is expected to hit back with an accusation that OPA is strangling peacetime production and encouraging black markets.

Robert R. Wason, president of the organization, will present NAM's case to the House Banking and Currency Committee, which is considering legislation to continue OPA for a year.

Representative Wolcott (D., Mich.), senior Republican on the House Banking Committee and his party's House leader on economic matters, already has announced he not only will seek far-reaching revisions in the OPA law but will try to hold its new lease on life to nine months.

NAVY

budget now stands, it will have to cut its plan for a 500,000-man Navy to 432,000. The size of the active postwar fleet, planned for 319 combat ships, will have to be cut by 20 per cent if the Budget Bureau cut prevails.

Representative Charles A. Plumley (R., Vt.) ranking Republican on the Appropriations Subcommittee for Navy, claimed that the Budget Bureau originally cut the Navy's estimate from $6,300,000,000 to $3,960,000,000.

"The President restored $264,000,000. That is the way the bill stands before my committee today," he said. "The budget proposal would make necessary a very decided cut in the size of our fleet; compel the scrapping or demolition of around a hundred vessels; reduce Naval personnel at least 10 per cent and put a stop to experimentation, research and development of new aircraft and other weapons.

"The great majority of Americans will not stand for, nor tolerate such a proposed scrapping of the Navy as the Budget Bureau would try to accomplish. We must be economical but should not go crazy."

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the House Naval Affairs Committee, said he was going to look into the Budget Bureau's action and Admiral Chester F. Nimitz, chief of naval operations, will testify tomorrow. He will be followed by Budget Bureau officials.

Meanwhile, a House Appropriations Subcommittee will be reviewing the Navy's budget in executive session.

Victims' Clothes Used in Trial Of France's Modern Bluebeard

Paris, March 17 (U.P.).—Huge amounts of clothing of victims allegedly put to death by France's modern "Bluebeard," Dr. Marcel Petiot, were stacked in the Palace of Justice today as evidence for the opening of Petiot's trial tomorrow.

Petiot is charged with the mass slaying of 26 persons, 16 tentatively identified and 10 unidentified, but he has admitted to police he killed at least 63—all of whom, he claims, were enemies of France during the German occupation.

The state, however, will attempt to prove that Petiot preyed on helpless Jews and other fugitives from the Germans, promising them escape from Europe and then slaying them for their money and belongings in a villa in Paris' Rue Lesueur.

Porters labored throughout Saturday afternoon bringing in the trunks and suitcases, each one neatly tagged, which contain clothing of Petoit's victims. Among the articles are 93 women's blouses and 30 men's suits.

The proceedings are expected to produce the most sensational criminal trial in modern French history, with chilling revelations of death that staked Paris under German occupation. The intense interest among Parisiens has prompted police to plan a strong cordon around the court to guard against demonstrations.

Trial of the 49-year-old Petoit is expected to last three weeks or longer.

Petiot is expected to base his defense on assertions that he was an active member of the French resistance movement and that all 63 victims whose slaying he admits were either Germans or Gestapo agents.

VA Tightens Controls on Veteran Schooling

Tighter controls over discharged servicemen studying or training under the GI Bill of Rights will be put into operation under plans announced last night by Veterans Administration.

VA officials announced the tightening up of controls is to protect the veterans from exploitation by "fly-by-night, gyp-joint" schools.

The VA revealed that "qualified training officers" will be assigned to keep a constant check on the progress and conduct of the 257,000 veterans now studying under the GI bill.

Monthly Reports

Each training officer will be assigned to make monthly reports on 75 students or on-the-job trainees, the VA stated.

The 30-day checkups will be to decide whether the veteran is "actually pursuing the course of training at the place where he is enrolled, and whether his conduct and progress in the course is satisfactory."

Usual Length of Course

Veterans should not be required, nor permitted to take longer to finish a training course than is "reasonable."

"The veteran must not be allowed to continue in training status merely because he has further entitlement and desires to augment his income through the subsistence allowance," the plan reveals.

Inquiry also will be made to see that a trainee veteran is being paid "a sufficient rate" in consideration of his work and his proficiency," to avoid subsidized labor."

In cases where training facilities are lacking, and a definite course cannot be set up, training officers are told to "remove the veteran from training and to stop payments of subsistence allowances."

Paul V. McNutt, High Commissioner to the Philippines, said last night that charges have been filed against 3000 alleged Philippine collaborationists and that an additional 2000 cases are near the filing stage.

He said in a statement that, although the United States is leaving prosecutions to Philippine civil authorities, "we expect to watch with sympathetic understanding the program of the collaborationist trials."

There already have been about 40 trials and about 20 convictions, he said, and "no effort will be spared to dispose of all the cases in the shortest possible time."

Loan Poll

Just over half—to be exact, 51 per cent—of the Washingtonians polled on the loan to Britain disapprove of it. The detailed results will be found in our news columns. The most prevalent reason given by the noes is that the United States should limit itself to looking after its own people. However, the United States can look after its own people and the financial needs of the British at the same time. There is no choice in the matter. It is not a case of either-or. Indeed, what we propose to put at Britain's disposal, as a loan, are dollars which will be of service in helping us look after our own people. With the dollars Britain will be able to demobilize the sterling bloc which is banded together for mutually exclusive trading. In that event, an Egyptian, say, will be able to use his dollars to buy an American automobile, and keep Americans at work. With the dollars Britain herself can get that temporary accommodation necessary to put her in condition to make her once again our main customer. At present she has to deny herself all kinds of necessities and luxuries of which we have a surplus, as, for instance, American movies.

The political advantages of making the loan are less obvious than the economic advantages, but they are real enough. They will not, of course, appeal to the inveterate isolationist. But it should be clear that a rich man in a community of paupers is not in a very enviable position. This is precisely our situation in the world. The envy that will grow up about our fortunate position, acquired in some part by the stimulation of war, bodes no good for our international relations. Nobody is so well off that he does not need friends, even if he can dispense with customers. Two Titans now dominate the world, Soviet Russia and the United States; and as long as such a power status remains, rivalry is bound to be bred. Our best hope of a peaceful world is to disperse our extra power as an investment in friendship. Where there is either hunger or chaos there can be no peace, which, in the last analysis, is the companion of a common prosperity. The loan to Britain is worth pondering in these terms as well as in the purely cash terms of trade—in the terms, that is to say, of the promotion of a common interest as the postwar equivalent of self-interest.

Our Hungry Neighbors

On the eve of his departure for an inspection tour of the famine-threatened countries of Europe, former President Herbert Hoover appealed to his fellow countrymen to treat the hungry human beings of other lands as they would neighbors in distress. By following the voluntary rules for saving food, he pointed out, we can give life to the starving just as surely as if they sat at our own tables.

The American people undoubtedly share Mr. Hoover's belief that the saving of human lives is a moral and spiritual duty. If we did not respond to appeals for aid based on broad humanitarian grounds, it would be a waste of time and energy to try to make a success of a voluntary food conservation program. It is essential, however, to stir the imagination of stay-at-home Americans whom hunger has never touched in order to secure the full measure of cooperation that the present emergency demands.

Mr. Hoover's address provided the kind of emotional stimulant required. His appeal is especially potent because it is made by an experienced public servant who knows that good intentions are not enough. He appreciates the importance of a strong organizational setup to make any relief program effective. Indeed, Mr. Hoover thinks that more stringent measures should be taken by the Administration to reduce livestock consumption of foodstuffs and increase available fats, and he favors strengthening the authority of the Secretary of Agriculture to make him a "real food administrator."

There is no conflict between public authority and private volition in the present instance. The more we do voluntarily as private citizens to save food by eliminating waste and restraining our appetites, the easier it will be to enforce essential governmental controls and the fewer those controls will have to be. The program of voluntary rationing to which we are committed, in short, supplements the administrative orders without which individual efforts would be misdirected and abortive. Under existing conditions we share Mr. Hoover's belief that voluntary action by the American people to cut down food consumption will be much more effective than coercion—compulsory rationing—since we know that the fate of millions depends upon the amount we are willing to spare out of our abundance.

Postwar Draft

There is no mystery in Secretary of State Byrnes' keen interest in continuation of selective service. As director of our foreign relations, he knows from first-hand information the powerful influence of military strength upon the international policies we are espousing. "Tragic experience," he says, "makes us realize that weakness invites aggression." If the United Nations is to succeed in establishing a reign of law in the world, it will be only through the strength of the nations working toward that end.

We fully agree with the Secretary of State, therefore, that the Selective Service Act cannot be permitted to lapse in the present state of world affairs. As it is now written, the drafting of men for military training and service would end on May 15. Considering the excessive demobilization already effected, failure to extend the act would leave the Army and Navy scrambling for troops for occupation duty. The hope of adequately pacifying and demilitarizing Germany and Japan before our withdrawal would be critically weakened. Protection of American supplies and property abroad would doubtless have to be abandoned in many instances. More serious still, relinquishment of our military draft before any plan for universal military training has been adopted would be considered notice to the world that the United States can scarcely be relied upon to carry out its obligations under the United Nations Charter.

We ought to face this situation realistically. The United Nations Charter is not just another pious agreement to abolish war. It means for us a solemn obligation to use our force, along with that of other peace-loving nations, if and when it becomes necessary to arrest aggression and to protect the rights of peoples and nations as set forth in the Charter. The United States could not possibly play the role it has essayed in weakness. Consequently, our armed forces must have a continuous, even though greatly reduced, flow of recruits into military training centers. To neglect this elementary requirement in the present trying period of transition from war to peace would be to jeopardize much of what we have won at staggering cost.

The Post has often expressed the hope that occupation duty can speedily be placed on a volunteer basis. But that is not yet wholly possible. And beyond the duty of policing Japan and part of Germany there looms the broader obligation of putting sinews into the structure of the United Nations. In the present status of world affairs, we are convinced that the United States cannot fulfill its duty to the new peace system and to its own people without continuing the draft until a long-term plan for universal military training has been put into effect.

New Labor Bill

Evidence of progress in shaping a constructive labor disputes law may be found in the substitute for the Case bill which has been approved by a Senate subcommittee. The more ambitious measure passed by the House is a patchwork with some good provisions but also a miscellaneous assortment of bad ones. Its chief objective is mediation of labor-management differences, but it would create a mediation board of management, labor and public representatives unsuited to its purpose. The mediatory character of the board would be further destroyed by giving it power to enforce decrees, thus hastily undermining confidence in its fairness.

In contrast to these impractical provisions, the substitute bill would set up a genuine Federal Mediation Board of five experts to be appointed by the President. They would all represent the Government, as mediators should. In cases in which mediation fails, they would be authorized to urge the parties to a dispute to resort to binding arbitration, but they could not issue edicts with force behind them.

In our opinion, the chief weakness of this substitute is that, in backing away from the extremes of the Case bill, it goes too far in the other direction. The board's duty would be "to encourage employers and employes in industries affecting commerce to make and maintain agreements concerning wages, hours and conditions of employment," to urge the settlement of differences by conferences rather than strikes or lockouts, and to use mediation, conciliation and voluntary arbitration to that end. "The board may, in its discretion," the bill reads, "proffer its services in any labor dispute . . ." In short, the bill is merely permissive. It lacks the ring of a positive declaration of congressional policy. We think the board should be affirmatively commanded to intervene in major disputes that threaten to halt the flow of commerce and adversely affect the public welfare.

Milk and water also characterize the statement of policy. Nowhere does the bill make it the positive duty of employers and unions to settle their differences by the conference-table method or by arbitration. It merely recognizes these methods as desirable and leaves anticollective-bargaining employers and quickie-strike agitators without even the stigma that should attach to violators of the common-sense procedures which the bill is designed to establish.

We think there is too much emphasis, moreover, on disputes as such. The secret of smooth industrial relations is the settlement of differences before the disputes stage is reached. The most fertile field for the proposed board is mediation between employers and unions seeking agreement before conciliation of excited disputants becomes necessary. Nevertheless, the bill offers a more secure foundation on which to work than does the Case bill, and there is still a chance to correct its chief weaknesses before it leaves the Senate Committee on Education and Labor.

Post-Pauley

The magnitude of the Administration's defeat in the matter of Mr. Pauley was emphasized by the very reluctance to concede it. Now the Democratic Party is seeking to repair the damage, and the first effort is, strategically, creditable, namely, the effort to persuade either Governor Darden or Joseph P. Kennedy to be Undersecretary of the Navy. But either would have his work cut out as an angel of healing. The battle for and against Mr. Pauley, as waged at committee hearings and in the newspapers, was too bitter to be easily forgotten or forgiven. Many hard words were said publicly, harder ones privately, and many hard feelings were engendered which will almost certainly have repercussions in the primary campaigns two years hence. As the result of the Pauley affair, the rift in the Democratic Party has grown wider and perhaps irreparable. Mr. Ickes, in his melodramatic manner, abandoned the Administration that he might be the freer to carry on his fight against Pauley with his old-time vehemence and with all his exhaustless resources of invective.

It seems to us that the Administration has only its own bad judgment to blame for the serious loss of face involved in this defeat. Quite apart from any question of Mr. Pauley's personal or business ethics, there was an obvious and almost shocking impropriety in nominating a millionaire oilman to such a position. At a time when the national oil resources have become a matter of such life and death importance, it is necessary that any public official who may be given power to make decisions or dispositions concerning them, should be not only above reproach but above even suspicion of reproach. Whatever his personal character, Mr. Pauley could not, in the nature of things, be above suspicion. His business interest and the national interest were in conflict at so many points that his appointment to a high post in either the Navy or the Department of Interior would have been almost as incongruous as the appointment of a professed anarchist to be Chief Justice of the United States. This was not plain to the party managers, but it was crystal clear to the electorate, and thank God that it was.

"Brass"

Marquis Childs the other day noted the lack of recognition, via the medal route, of the scientists whose salient work in winning the war was acclaimed by Stalin during the toasting with Secretary Byrnes at the recent Moscow conference. The statement came on the heels of the promotion of one James Alphonse Kilian to the permanent rank of colonel.

This Colonel Kilian was in command of the depot at the time that, in such cynical violation of the Articles of War, the Lichfield (England) outrages are said to have taken place. The newspapers had carried stories of Colonel Kilian's arrogant, almost insolent, behavior at the court-martial of Sergt. Judson H. Smith, one of 12 of his subordinates accused of acts of gross cruelty toward prisoners. A large part of the public had been reading how Colonel Kilian had stuck out his tongue at the prosecutor, how he had replied mechanically, "I don't know" and "I can't remember" to questions addressed to him. They had read how an Army major called as a witness in the case stated that Kilian and another officer had threatened him with violence because of his testimony.

The Senators had evidently been too busy to follow the case, because when the list of promotions containing Kilian's name and 348 others came up for confirmation, they approved it automatically. Next day, however, when The Post called attention to Kilian's connection with the Lichfield scandal, the list was quickly recalled on motion of Senator Thomas.

The crowning effrontery came when the Lichfield case had aroused a certain curiosity as to why an officer who, on the face of the evidence, was temperamentally unqualified for the exercise of any authority, should have been awarded the Legion of Merit. The citation showed that Colonel Kilian had received the decoration because of his "tact, initiative and sound judgment," because of his services in "enhancing Anglo-American relations," and because he "earned the most high esteem and respect for himself from those he came in contact with, both military and civilian." Here, in the light of the Lichfield revelations, is an example of military insensibility that surpasses even the award of the Distinguished Service Medal to Colonel Wyman for his services in Hawaii. It is bringing this medal business into something approaching contempt.

Loan To Britain

The British loan, in its far-reaching effects, is almost as vital a measure as lend-lease or the approval of the United Nations Charter itself.

Great Britain mobilized for the war to a considerably greater degree than we did and with 70 per cent of her exports gone has had to reduce the food ration dangerously below the war level. All British investments in the United States were liquidated to pay for munitions to keep the Axis at bay while Americans debated and prepared.

There is every evidence that if the loan is not approved the British will, of necessity, have to continue the sterling bloc for many years, which may develop a number of economic-political trade blocs which will destroy the possibility of multilateral trade relations on which we depend for our prosperity.

It is common practice for businessmen to lend financial assistance to old customers to get them on their feet after a disaster and preserve their business for the future. Canada and Great Britain are our largest customers.

Twice in our lifetime, the British Commonwealth has been our first line of defense. There is grave danger that, politically and geographically, they might again be our first line of defense.

The recent rapid deterioration in international relations should warn us that the democracies must hang together or they may hang separately. We dare not let the British down. If they are further weakened, we are weakened. Only the closest cooperation between the democracies can preserve freedom and peace.

FREDERICK C. McKEE.

"Immigration Quotas"

As an American of Anglo-Saxon descent, I was amazed by F. S. Wilson's panegyric to the Anglo-Saxons of the United States in the issue of March 10. One wonders who Mr. Wilson thinks built America—the lords and ladies of eighteenth and nineteenth century England? The vast majority of people who came to America, starting with the earliest settlers, came to these shores for the very reason that they were oppressed somewhere else.

Furthermore, we who are Anglo-Saxons would do well to remember that the waves of immigration were encouraged and subsidized by American employers (chiefly Anglo-Saxon) who urged and even paid the Irish, Poles, Russians, Slovaks, Hungarians, etc., to come here to build the railroads, the factories, mine the coal, and run the machines which have given the United States the standard of living which we enjoy today.

Not only are all of us the children of immigrants, but many of our greatest citizens are first and second generation Americans. One wonders if Japan would yet be defeated had it not been for the efforts of a number of non-Anglo-Saxon scientists whose genius brought victory to the Allies rather than to the Axis in the race for the atom bomb.

Of course, aside from race pride and prejudice, the fallacy in all these fears of further immigration is that the United States is going to be "flooded" with hordes of Europeans (non-Anglo-Saxon) who will crowd us off our land. The fact is that even if all immigration quotas were filled (an unlikely event), only 153,000 persons could come to this country in a year.

Because we have heard and read so much about refugees in the past few years, many Americans apparently have the impression that the United States is currently sheltering thousands of refugees. This impression is erroneous. At no time during the war were our immigration quotas filled. Actually, of course, most people who will come to the United States will not be refugees strictly speaking. They will wish to join relatives already in this country.

Nylon Riot

Sure it's funny; it's just the funniest thing in the world! It was mass hysteria that made me, a 51-year-old woman, go without my dinner and stand in line for two hours to try to get my first pair of stockings in eight months.

Those G st. men had the right idea when they planned to give the working women a chance. I'll remember that in the future anyway, even if I wasted two horrible hours after a long day's work and did not get food until nearly 8 o'clock—because, according to The Post, I am just a hysterical fool who probably adores Frank Sinatra. You make me sick!

E. P.
Washington, March 14.

How would you like to be compelled to go to work without trousers? Trousers are the conventional leg covering for men, even as stockings are the conventional leg covering for women. Instead of condemning and ridiculing women for trying to buy hose, you should put on a serious and vigorous newspaper campaign in behalf of hose rationing.

HELEN LAGERQUIST.

Fruit In Restaurants

Point 10 of the Famine Emergency Committee's recommendations to restaurants says: "Substitute fruits . . . for pastries and cakes whenever practicable." As a matter of fact, it is next to impossible to get such a simple thing as a raw orange served in an American restaurant.

Can it be that the price ceiling is so low that there is not enough profit to make it worth while to offer on a menu? I do not believe there is a single restaurant in Washington, from the most expensive to the cheapest, where you can eat raw fruit unless you bring it along with you. And yet there must be a very great number of people for whom this is the only dessert permitted by their diet!

Boxing Fatalities

The letter of Mr. T. T. Sondern, in The Post of March 10, states that boxing has no place as a college sport. That is a matter of opinion. Against unfortunate fatalities in sport must be balanced the good it does for the majority. For instance, eight young men who fought in Guadalcanal's patrol actions wrote, "But for what you taught me I would be dead."

In the percentage tables of injuries sustained in college sports boxing eighth for minor injuries, sixth for major injuries—behind football, wrestling, track, soccer, basketball and baseball, in that order, and ahead of water polo, swimming, tennis and golf.

Over a span of 10 years 44,800 took part in collegiate ring contests. There was a fatality at Washington State in 1937, one at V. M. I. in the same year, one at Catholic University this year. Total fatalities 3; percentage of fatalities over 10 years, .000007.

Multiple-Purpose Stadium

I have read several news stories in The Post recently about a proposed two-million-dollar stadium to be built in the District as a war memorial.

I feel Washington has a permanent sports population which would benefit from such a stadium, but I believe the advocates of this project are making an error in proposing that the stadium be built primarily for major baseball and football, an error committed by Yale and other universities, as well as cities such as Philadelphia, Pasadena, and Los Angeles, when they built huge bowls and stadia for no other purpose than to provide spectator room for six or seven football games a year.

In recent years it has been the policy of colleges to build multiple-purpose stadia, so that instead of using steel and concrete to support the anatomy of 90,000 people a few days of the year, the structures house indoor tracks, swimming pools, and gymnasia.

I have even a stronger objection to the proposed Washington stadium than the fact that it is old-fashioned in design and conception; it is designed for spectator use only, and would offer no relaxation or exercise to the thousands of citizens and Government workers of Washington other than that involved in fighting one's way to and from the hot dog stand between halves.

As a former Government employe, I can remember only too clearly the desperate, humid and hot days of summer when hundreds of us low-paid Government servants debauched from the marble halls into a city with no large or pleasant municipal swimming pools in which to go swimming and were forced to flee to the shade of air-conditioned bars and the opiate of gin rickeys and frozen daiquiris.

In recent years I have attempted to find places where enlisted men might play volleyball, indoor ball, and outdoor touch football, and it has been well-nigh impossible to find such facilities convenient to the Government or military areas.

The businessmen of Washington might reflect upon these facts: Madison Square Garden in recent years has been a very satisfactory source of profit for its bondholders. During the year it has weekly prize-fights and collegiate basketball games; it houses ice hockey, dog and horse shows, and ice extravaganzas, and has been the meeting hall for dozens of political and military rallies. All this winter the basketball games have drawn from 18,000 to 19,000 people.

There is no reason why a municipal stadium-gymnasium should not be used for the more important collegiate spectator games, from football, track and baseball to the indoor games of hockey, boxing, track and basketball. This same arena could be used for concerts, political rallies, and public debates, a need more evident each time the DAR fretfully closes the doors of Constitution Hall (the most recent refusal being the banishment of a group of jazz musicians who have appeared in New York City in Carnegie Hall many times: the Eddie Condon ensemble).

I recommend that The Post sponsor a memorial sportsman's park, to consist of outdoor tennis courts, volley ball courts, a series of public swimming pools, softball diamonds, and outdoor track, a football and baseball stadium built to house an indoor gymnasium, indoor swimming pool, and track, and and that an effort be made to make this the most beautiful such park in the United States, either through a bonus for the prize-winning design, a Nation-wide study of existing arenas and multiple-sports facilities, or through any other method fostered by The Post as the Nation's newspaper.

Mind And Monopoly

THE FIRST FREEDOM by Morris L. Ernst. (Macmillan, $3.)

The burden of Mr. Ernst's argument is about the same as Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard's in The Disappearing Daily, published about two years ago; namely, that public access to information and ideas is being thwarted by the ever tightening monopolies of the instruments of public communication. Mr. Ernst's work, since it considers the magazines, the book trade, the radio and the movies, in addition to the daily newspaper press, is the more elaborate, and possibly the more informative; but Mr. Villard's is much the easier to read; after all he was one of the most capable as well as one of the most courageous editors of his time. Mr. Ernst, however, is a lawyer, celebrated, among other things, for his battles in court in behalf of James Joyce's Ulysses and the right of authors to use "the four letter Anglo-Saxon words." But evidently he has himself no particular fondness for the Anglo-Saxon; instead he displays a rather lusty appetite for classical roots and affixes; he likes to speak of the factual implementation of data, and of the exploration of new techniques and of vertical integrations. Just what vertical integrations are, I do not quite make out, though I gather they have something to do with the movie trust; but translated into Anglo-Saxon words—after the formula applied by the late Sir Walter Raleigh to the leaders of the London Times—a vertical integration would give us something like "a standing up of a whole making" or possibly "an up-standing of a making-whole."

On the main point, however, Mr. Ernst is entirely clear; namely, that the control of communications by smaller and smaller groups of men, more interested in personal power or personal profit than in the public weal, is a very grave danger to whatever is left of the traditional freedom to speak one's mind. The danger is that there may soon be no mind to speak, because of the stereotype that monopolism is gradually imposing on American thought and imagination. This "boilerplating of the mind," to use Mr. Ernst's phrase, by mass journalism and mass entertainment, may well be preliminary to that wholesale "enthusiasm for slavery" which the French jurist M. Barthelemy, has declared to be the most conspicuous historical phenomenon of our epoch. The monopolistic tendencies of American journalism in the past 20 years seem now about to be repeated in the field of book publishing, with the increasing influence and power of the big book clubs and the rise of great publishing cartels. I could wish that Mr. Ernst had also said something about the gradual but quite evident transition of book reviewing from a disinterested art to a mechanism of mass merchandising. But then Mr. Ernst is more hopeful than some of us of the possibilities of arresting and indeed reversing the whole trend. He perceives very plainly that the only possible escape from the ubiquitous tyranny of the common denominator lies in the restoration of diversity and free competition, and this, like a good New Dealer, he proposes to accomplish by Government intervention in the form of trust-busting campaigns, the legal abolition of anonymity, graduated systems of postal and other subsidies that would favor the smaller enterprises and hamper the large ones, and so on.

I suspect, however, that a real reform might need to go much deeper and that it might have to include an institution for which Mr. Ernst has apparently high respect, that is to say, the American educational system. Mr. Ernst has a simple Jeffersonian faith in the blessings of literacy; but the very existence of so many highly popular and profitable newspapers and magazines comprised mainly of pictures might indicate that some of us are none too eager to make the most of our blessings. This, no less than the tremendous capital investments required for rotary presses, photoengraving departments, truck squadrons and whatnot, may serve to explain this paradox: that while the number of periodicals has so greatly diminished, the total of circulation figures has been enormously swollen. After all, as Tocqueville pointed out more than a century ago, in a free country newspapers not only act upon their readers but are acted upon by them. I am of course all in favor of Mr. Ernst's plan of a free and open "market place of ideas," but I wonder if our brethren will be quite as eager as he seems to suppose to shop about in it. My own experience has been that the current products of our schools and universities have a distaste rather than an appetite for ideas, as such, especially for ideas that may run counter to the prevalent stereotypes and prejudices. Even Mr. Ernst shows a certain indifference to ideas that are outside the field of his special concerns, as, for example, when he says "it was illegal for a man 400 years ago to suggest that the world was round," because "the church-state had taught otherwise." The allusion here, I take it, is to Galileo and his heliocentric astronomy. Yet the truth is that Galileo's celebrated dispute with the Inquisition was not about whether the world was round but whether it went round, an equally important but nevertheless slightly different matter. Evidently, then, Mr. Ernst is not quite enough interested in the concepts of the medieval, or Ptolemaic, astronomy to get them straight.

Prospect For Party Realignment

VERY SOON NOW, the Republican Party will have a birthday. The Grand Old Party will be 92 years old.

CHILDS

Human beings at that advanced age usually have suffered the ravages of senility and decay. But the Republican Party is just now looking as coy and hopeful as a debutante waltzing past the stag line.

The reason, of course, is the shimmering prospect of party triumph that seems to grow out of Democratic errors long compounded and the general confusion and unrest in the wake of the war.

At the same time that the GOP celebrates its birthday, the men who control the destinies of the party must agree on a new national chairman. The new chairman will direct the congressional campaign on which Republicans are staking so much hope. Even more important, he will set up the tone for the party for 1948.

According to all present indications, the choice lies between two members of the House. They both typify the alliance—now formalized in a working committee — between Republicans and Southern Democrats.

One is Representative Clarence J. Brown of Ohio, an aggressive, hard-driving, old-line Republican. He's never had an unorthodox thought in his life. Or if he has, he's quickly suppressed it.

The key to Brown's role in the House is his position on the Rules Committee. The Rules Committee is the No. 1 bottleneck which keeps progressive legislation from a vote.

Brown makes adroit use of the Rules Committee. When it will most embarrass the Democrats and show up their helplessness and inner division, he gets the Republicans on the committee to go along with the Southern Democrats.

THIS SAME COALITION functions in the House. Republicans plus Southern Democrats were responsible for defeating the vital provisions in the veterans' housing bill.

The other Congressman mentioned for the Republican national chairmanship is Representative Carroll Reece of Tennessee. A small-town banker, Reece has a milder temperament than Brown. His record is somewhat less narrowly Republican.

The significant fact is that he comes from Tennessee, a border State with many of the characteristics of the South. It would be an extraordinary departure for the party of Lincoln, McKinley, Theodore Roosevelt and Coolidge to turn to the South for its chairman.

It suggests that a new party alignment may not be impossible—an alignment which would make the party labels mean something.

Today both parties—Republican and Democrat—are just big circus tents that take in everything. That is why, when they come to write a national platform, it invariably is reduced to the lowest common denominator.

By formalizing the Republican-Southern coalition, the GOP has assumed what amounts to public responsibility for legislative action. If price control is scuttled by the same coalition and we get more inflation, then the Democrats can make a case for putting the blame on the GOP, which is numerically the most important partner in the combine.

On the question of premium payments to stimulate home construction, the House deliberately avoided a record vote. But those who sat in the gallery and checked members as they voted estimate that 130 Republicans and 30 Democrats joined to kill the premium provision. That is one indication of the numerical superiority of the GOP in the combine.

THE WAY IS WIDE OPEN for two new parties, one progressive and one conservative. The voter would have a choice. He would have a reasonable assurance that the label on the package told the truth.

Of course, we have come to use political terms very loosely. Brown and Reece would probably call themselves conservatives. So do the Southern Democrats.

A conservative is one who wants to conserve the system we have today. That does not mean standing in the path of all change. To conserve the essentials of our system—what is truest and most vital—it is necessary to adjust to the great changes that have happened in the world we live in.

Too often our image of a conservative is that of a large, determined individual saying "No!" in a loud voice. We need conservatives who know how to conserve, just as we need progressives who know how to progress.

What Is "Security"?

IT IS DIFFICULT to discuss the new weapons and their implications without seeming to dabble in what the pulp magazines call "scientific fiction." Yet nothing is more urgent than to grasp the meaning of these hideous engines of war. In the context of the present world crisis, for example, it is a fact of major importance that the armed services' experimentation with long-range guided missiles has already born important fruits.

In fact, a radio controlled rocket, designed to carry an atomic warhead, and to land within a 1-mile radius of its target at a range of several thousands of miles, is now understood to be beyond the blueprint stage. Enough has been done with it to convince the highest authorities that it is "entirely practicable," and that existing designs will work. Nor is this especially surprising. Before the war ended, the Germans had designed a guided rocket with a range of 3000 miles, and had reached the first stages of production. All that the American experimenters have done is to increase considerably the range of the German model, and to provide a new warhead of fissionable material.

IN THE CONTEXT of the present crisis, the thing to consider is the effect of such weapons on the whole concept of "national security." The rivalry for oil, the bullying of small, corrupt, oriental nations, and the competition of national imperialisms all tend to make this crisis swell like any nineteenth century power political row. But the chief men of the American and British high commands, at least, know that nineteenth century power politics, carried on solely in terms of spheres of influence, etc., is already moribund.

After careful study, the British Chiefs of Staff some time ago reported to the Committee of Imperial Defense, which reports in turn to the Cabinet, that the new weapons have rendered the British Isles virtually indefensible. The conclusion of the British strategists, which is now one of the foundations of British policy, was that the success of the United Nations was the sole military safeguard of the British future. An exactly parallel conclusion was reached in a paper prepared for the Joint Chiefs of Staff by the operations and planning division of the War Department, which is the strategic brain of the American Army. OPD pointed out the concentration and vulnerability of American industry; the fact that in the new warfare a large scale, surprise attack could be immediately decisive; and that the further fact that the American Constitution virtually requires this country to accept a surprise attack before girding itself for war. Thus OPD reasoned that the only sure defense was the political defense, through the United Nations and similar instrumentalities.

AMERICAN EXPERTS, both political and military, are inclined to suspect that the Soviet high command has not recognized the implications of the new weapons. For one thing "security" cannot be the motive of present Soviet policy, if these implications are understood by the Russians, since occupation of Iran and Manchuria will give no "security" against a rocket with a range of 5000 miles. For another thing, it is generally believed that the Soviets do not as yet possess the new weapons. Marshal of the Red Air Force Nevikoff is authority for the statement that during the war, the whole Russian productive effort was concentrated on support of the ground armies. After the war, the United States and British armies went to some pains to round up or destroy what could be got from Germany. For example, a special Amreican task force was sent deep into enemy territory to make sure of rounding up one especially important group of scientists. Then, too, vital installations, such as the great underground ME 262 aircraft factory, were hastily destroyed to avoid their falling into other hands.

But any advantage in their new engines of war can only be temporary. That is why the problem of international control must be solved. Reports on this subject are now being prepared by a technical committee appointed by Major General Groves of the Manhattan District project, and by a political committee headed by Undersecretary of State Dean Acheson. The two reports will be coordinated, and will form the basis of the American recommendations to the Atomic Energy Commission of the United Nations. A careful search is being made for the best man to act as American representative on this commission, with former Assistant Secretary of War John J. McCloy high in the running at present.

IT HAS BEEN said that American policy makers believe Soviet policy can only be radically changed by a sharp crisis, which will convince the Soviet leaders that resistance to them is determined. This has been strangely interpreted as meaning that the the American policy makers desire to precipitate a crisis now. It is not American desire, but Soviet action, which has precipitated the Iranian crisis. Everyone hopes that this crisis may be surmounted without a breach in the fabric of international relations.

Sooner or later, however, the existence of the new weapons will make it necessary to find out whether Russian policy can be radically changed. For only a radical change of current Russian policy can make possible true internationalization of the new weapons, which will both mean very great sacrifices of sovereignty by all nations, and larger acceptance of immediate risks by those who have the weapons than by those who do not. If the new weapons are not brought under firmer international control—if all the nations of the world are to live in perpetual fear of being destroyed. one fine morning, by any ambitious neighbor—the future hardly bears thinking about.

Our Story Abroad

By Ernest Lindley

Information And Foreign Policy

CURRENT TRENDS abroad are crowded with reminders that the need to see that American ideals, aims, and policies are understood by all who can be persuaded to look or listen did not end with the war. This is so obviously so that members of Congress are showing a renewed and friendlier interest in the State Department's program for maintaining an overseas information service.

Lindley

It is in behalf of this program that W. Averell Harriman, former Ambassador to the Soviet Union, among others, has recently appeared before the House Rules Committee and a House Appropriations Subcommittee. For, to carry forward this work, the State Department needs both money—it is asking a basic appropriation of 19 million dollars for next year—and the authorization provided by the Bloom bill which is now in the hands of the Rules Committee. Mr. Harriman's general observations, based on his experiences in Moscow, provided a telling background for the argument for official information services overseas. He is qualified also to give counsel based on his observations in Britain, in most of the nations of Europe, the Middle East, and portions of the Orient, during nearly five years of service as Mr. Roosevelt's personal representative and as an Ambassador.

Russia is the most difficult nation of all into which to get information which presents accurately our mode of life, our institutions, our ideals and our purposes. The Russian people see and hear about us only what the government permits them to see and hear. The picture they get is fragmentary and often distorted. Even the higher Soviet officials know little about us.

THE CIRCULATION of privately published newspapers and general periodicals is prohibited. The Soviet authorities, however, have permitted the publication by the American Government of a bimonthly illustrated magazine in the Russian language. This has a selected circulation of about 10,000. In addition, the Soviet government has permitted—or, perhaps, promoted is the word—the importation of American literature on scientific and technical subjects, and to some extent on the arts. The works of a number of American fiction writers have been translated into Russian and some of the other languages of the USSR. The sum is only a thin trickle of information. The American press associations and other private agencies are powerless to enlarge it. The American Government may not be able to enlarge it very much. But it must endeavor to do so, for without better understanding the hope of averting an eventual war is slim.

It may be possible to supplement the present tiny flow into Russia of information about ourselves by short-wave broadcasts in the languages of the USSR. The Soviet authorities might object, and try to jam the broadcasts or punish those who listened. But this additional method may be worth a trial.

In Russian occupied countries, the American information services overseas have had some limited successes in introducing and spreading accurate information about the U. S. and its policies and objectives.

IN MANY OTHER countries, information about the United States is more freely circulated. But in very few of them can American private agencies do the whole job, especially in competition with the vigorous propaganda programs of various other nations. The Russians have their official Soviet information services in foreign countries. More important, they have at their disposal the energy and ingenuity of the Communist parties in many lands. Early this year they were using also 35 short-wave transmitters to beam their propaganda abroad.

Peron's victory almost certainly presages an even more active anti-United States campaign by the Argentine government among our Spanish-speaking neighbors to the south. There are other governments, more favorably disposed toward the United States, which have their own special axes to grind.

These are some of the reasons why almost everybody who has had experience in international affairs favors the maintenance of an alert adequately-staffed overseas information service by the State Department. This embraces short-wave broadcasts in foreign languages, the maintenance of libraries of information in foreign countries, and staffs of information men attached to our embassies, the adapting and scoring of educational films, as well as a number of related activities, some of them reaching into the area of cultural exchanges. During the war, such activities proved their worth many times over. They are no less needed now.

U. S. Fact-Finding Board Seen Last Resort in Coal Dispute

By the Associated Press

The Government is unlikely to rush into the bituminous coal wage dispute with a fact-finding board except as a last resort, a key labor official said yesterday.

Fact-finding might be used, if necessary, but direct conciliation will be tried first in the event negotiations bog down, this official said.

Neither John L. Lewis, head of the United Mine Workers, nor the coal operators seemed inclined at the start of their negotiations for a new contract to favor appointment of a fact-finding board.

Lewis, who frowns on any Government intervention, even fought participation of the War Labor Board in his wage tussles of 1943 and 1945.

The coal operators will reply to Lewis' nine generalized demands tomorrow—but persons close to the producers say they will not make the specific offer he requested.

Lewis Must Act

These men say the mine owners will insist that since Lewis reopened the present agreement with dark hints of a strike in the absence of a new pact April 1, the first proposals should come from him.

Protracted shadow-boxing without a concrete demand or offer in dollars and cents might force the conciliation service to step in earlier than it now contemplates, said the unidentifiable labor official who discussed possible Government action with a reporter.

In that event, appointment of a fact-finding board might have some merit, he thought.

A notable lack of effectiveness of fact-finding in settling the General Motors and steel wage deadlocks, and the dubious success encountered in the oil and Greyhound bus disputes, has not encouraged Government executives responsible for keeping industrial strife at a minimum.

This is their private view and does not necessarily conflict with President Truman's request for fact-finding legislation, since fact-finding boards with the powers contemplated by Mr. Truman might carry more weight with the disputants, they hastened to add.

O'Neill to Reply

The coal operators' reply to Lewis will be made by Charles O'Neill, ruddy-faced former UMW district vice president who became a coal operator and now heads the producers' negotiating group on the opposite side of the table.

The operators, irked by Lewis' self-styled "indictment" accusing them of responsibility for past deaths and injuries in the mines, undoubtedly will challenge both his conclusions and his casualty figures.

Among his nine demands Lewis has asked for creation of a health and welfare fund, shorter working hours and more pay, and "adjustment of a controversy" over unionization of supervisory workers.

He would not say specifically what he wanted—a baffling negotiating procedure he has not used for 20 years.

Instead, he said to the operators: "We want to work in your mines. Make us an offer. Maybe we'll buy."

Welles Believes Peron Victory May Bring Break

By International News Service

Former Undersecretary of State Sumner Welles said last night that election of Col. Juan Peron to the Argentine Presidency might cause a break in relations between the United States and Argentina.

Welles, in a radio address, said Peron's election "would probably result in a grave division within the inter-American system." He continued:

"It would probably imply, in view of the present policy of the Department of State, the rupture of all official relations between Argentina and the United States.

"It would probably mean that some of the American republics would take the side of Argentina and others the side of the United States."

Welles asserted that the present Argentine crisis could have been avoided if the United States had not followed a policy which, he said, "smacked of intervention at every stage."

100,000 Workers Will Return To General Electric Jobs Today

General Motors locals of the CIO United Auto Workers union yesterday fell in line one-by-one with ratification of a settlement in the 113-day auto strike, as the CIO Electrical Workers announced termination of its 62-day strike against General Electric after similar rank and file approval.

Only one of the first 30, out of 96 GM locals to report flatly rejected the terms—including an 18½ cent wage raise—arrived at last Wednesday by the union's top negotiating committee.

However, locals at 10 plants favored national settlement terms but held up a return to work pending settlement of local issues.

The corporation has indicated that it will be ready to call back the first of its 175,000 idle production workers within a few days. Plants in nearly 100 cities have been closed since November 21.

The UAW-CIO top leadership regarded as significant the action of nearly 4000 shouting, applauding unionists in Flint, Mich., who ignored the advice of their officers and clambered aboard the back-to-work bandwagon.

In a loud, colorful open air mass meeting, Militant Chevrolet Local 659 voted 2525 to 806 to go back to work after their leaders had urged continuation of the strike.

Joseph Dermody, international Representative of the CIO Electrical Workers Union, informed the General Electric management that "in view of the action by the membership the strike is terminated."

The settlement, ratified by locals over the weekend, also provided for an 18½ cent hourly boost.

Union spokesmen said the 100,000 workers involved would return to their jobs today in 50 GE plants in 16 States.

Other favorable labor news included settlement of a 55-day walkout of 14,000 CIO United Steelworkers at Timken Roller Bearing Co. plants in Ohio under a tentative agreement, subject to negotiation, for an 18½ cent hourly wage increase.

In Washington, Reid Robinson, president of the CIO Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, said a strike of 6000 Phelps-Dodge mining Co. employes in Arizona, New Mexico and Texas, set for 7 a. m. today, had been postponed 24 hours pending a meeting in New York of company directors.

Strict Secrecy Is Planned for Peace Parley

Paris, March 17 (AP).—Strict secrecy will prevail at the European Peace Conference in May, with newsmen permitted to attend only the two scheduled public sessions at the opening and close of the deliberations, French officials said today.

American, British and Russian delegates charged with drawing up the preliminary peace treaty drafts prior to the conference agreed upon such a policy, a French source said.

Present plans provide for confining newsmen and radio broadcasters to the "Hall of Lost Steps" which adjoins the main conference room in Luxembourg Palace, those in charge of preparations said.

Two entrances will be provided, one for newsmen and delegates who want to mingle with the press and radio representatives and the other solely for delegates who want to avoid newsmen.

French sources said they were prepared to establish microphones in the palace and special teletypes for news agencies but were told "there's no use. There will be only two public sessions." Consequently, these plans were abandoned.

"The one chance of changing this policy is that the American press will become aroused and create enough pressure of public opinion to get it changed," a French source volunteered.

The Paris conference, to be attended by 21 nations, will play an advisory role. Before it convenes, four of the major powers will already have drafted preliminary treaties—for Finland by Russia and Britain; for Italy by the United States, Russia, Britain and France, and for the Balkans by Russia, Britain and the United States.

The smaller powers will be permitted to make recommendations, after which the major powers will conclude the pacts.

Christian Herald Says Protestants Failed Chaplains

New York, March 17 (AP).—The Christian Herald, a Protestant publication, said today the Protetsant Church had let down its chaplains during the war.

Discussing a statement attributed last fall to Brig. Gen. Harry Vaughan, military aide to President Truman, in which he said the Roman Catholic Church had a better technique in obtaining chaplains than the Protestant Church, the article said:

"It is true. The Roman Catholics, according to our best advisers, showed a startling alacrity in at least endeavoring to fill their chaplain quotas promptly, but the Protestants often seemed to go out of their way to keep their best men out of the chaplaincy."

The periodical said "The Protestant quota forever fell short" and Roman Catholic chaplains were better fitted for their jobs than the Protestant chaplains.

a grocery and beat her over the head with a brick. She dragged herself to the home of a son-in-law, Joseph Tucker, of East Columbia Park, after the man fled.

Hyattsville police said the youth took them to the scene Sunday morning and reenacted the crime, explaining that he followed the woman from the grocery to rob her of 68 cents.

The rape-holdup and robbery case came between 12:30 and 2:30 a. m. yesterday, on Sherriff rd., near Huntsville, when Beyers and his companion were surprised by four youths, two of them armed with a rifle and shotgun.

Beyers told the police he was held at the point of the two guns while the youths raped the girl. The couple was robbed of $30.

Had Quarreled With Husband

The woman told police she had had a quarrel with her husband Wednesday night and was to return to her home in West Virginia. She was in a restaurant with Sprye, she said, and when they walked out, he dragged her into an alley, criminally assaulted her and took her watch, wedding and engagement rings valued at $50.

Police said Sprye's criminal record includes prison sentences in North Carolina and the District for attempted rape, assault with a deadly weapon, robbery and larceny.

Theft of a $1000 mink coat from the Officers Club at Bolling Field Saturday night was reported by Jackson C. Davis, former Air Force major of 2022 Columbia rd. nw. The coat was owned by his wife.

John P. Smith Funeral Is Set For Tomorrow

Funeral services for John P. Smith, 69, who died Friday at his home, 319 1st st. ne., will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at the Lee funeral home, 4th and Massachusetts ave. ne. Burial will be in Cedar Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Smith, a resident of the District for 43 years, was well known here for his efforts in getting Congress to restore the reenlistment allowance for men in the United States Coast Guard.

Upon his retirement from the Government Printing Office in 1938, Mr. Smith devoted his full time to approaching legislators on Capitol Hill who would sponsor appropriations restoring the reenlistment pay cut off during depression years. His efforts met success when Congress restored the allowance shortly before the recent war broke out.

Mr. Smith came to Washington from Rome, N. Y. in 1903 to join the GPO as a compositor and at the time of his retirement was in the monotype section. He held a dual Masonic membership—the Roman Lodge, F. A. A. M., 223, Rome, N. Y., and Semper Paratus Lodge No. 49, F. A. A. M., Columbia Chapter No. 1, R. A. M., of Washington.

During wartime, Mr. Smith worked as a volunteer helper with local ration boards. He leaves his wife, Mrs. Marilla A. Smith; two sons, Paul H. Smith, linotype operator for The Washington Post; and Lieut. Charles W. Smith, of the United States Coast Guard; a daughter, Mrs. Gertrude Kauffman, of Washington; a brother, George E. Smith, of Rome, N. Y., and a sister, Miss Gertrude B. Smith, of Utica, N. Y.

Byron W. Alsop

Byron W. Alsop, 44, of 800 N. Danville rd., Arlington, Va., a marine engineer and native of Washington, died yesterday at Georgetown Hospital.

A graduate of Central High School and George Washington University, Mr. Alsop served as a draftsman with the United States Maritime Commission since 1938. Before that he worked at the Washington Navy Yard in a similar capacity.

He was a member of the East Gate Masonic Lodge, the Anchor Club and the Arlington Presbyterian Church.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Ada Lee Alsop, and two sons, Byron Lee and Edward Stuart Alsop.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the Ives funeral home, 2847 Wilson blvd., Arlington. Burial will be at Columbia Gardens Cemetery.

Mrs. Margaret R. Michael

Mrs. Margaret R. Michael, 46, died yesterday at her home, 4324 Garrison st. nw. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at Eldbrooke Methodist Church, Wisconsin ave. and River road. Burial will be in Mount Zion Cemetery.

A native of Washington, Mrs. Michael was the wife of Spencer B. Michael, prominent local patent attorney. She was an active member of Friendship Chapter of Eastern Star and of the Eldbrooke Methodist Episcopal Church.

Surviving, in addition to her husband, are two daughters, Margaret Louise and Patricia Ann Michael of Washington; three sisters, Mrs. Grace Berrick of Towson, Md.; Mrs. Bertha L. Walker of Washington, and Mrs. Elva Baum of Arlington, and a brother, Fred E. Robey of Washington.

Mrs. Annie B. Browning

Funeral services for Mrs. Annie Botts Browning, 83, who died yesterday morning at Culpeper, Va., following an extended illness, will be held at Culpeper Baptist Church today at 3 p. m.

The services will be conducted by Dr. J. T. Edwards, pastor of the church, and by the Rev. J. D. Beckwith, rector of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church. Burial will be in Fairview Cemetery.

A lifelong resident of Culpeper and Rappahannock Counties, Mrs. Browning was the wife of the late Charles W. Browning, prominent Culpeper farmer. Surviving are a daughter, Mrs. Virginia Wood, and a son, P. M. Browning, real estate dealer, both of Culpeper, and a number of grandchildren.

Chain of Recitals Provides Outstanding Experience

By Ray C. B. Brown

Yesterday's chain of recitals, providing one of the most interesting experiences of the season, linked seriatim a Brazilian pianist, a French violinist, a Virginia soprano and a New Jersey pianist. The round of listening began at the Pan American Union, where a Jose Vieira Brandao played a matinee recital devoted exclusively to piano pieces by his famous compatriot and teacher, Heitor Villa-Lobos.

A one-composer program is unusual, and apart from its novelty was particularly welcome in the case of Villa-Lobos, who is the greatest and most versatile of contemporary Latin-American tone-poets. He is best known in this country by his orchestral music, and his works for piano bulk small in his large output. Brandao played six pieces from the recent "Practical Guide," four of the 16 "Circle Dances" composed in 1920, and four pieces from the "Brazilian Cycle" written in 1941.

Admirably equipped as to speed, dextrous accuracy and rhythmic dynamism, Brandao gave the pieces authoritative readings which were vitalized and richly colored. What struck one most in this music was the highly individual idiom of Villa-Lobos, who is doing for the regional folk songs and dances of Brazil what Liszt did for the Magyar. The material is subjected to modern harmonization while retaining its characteristic rhythmic complexity and its flavor of melody. The writing is for the most part virtuosic, and it was as a virtuoso that Brandao brought these interesting studies to our attention.

Brahms Sonato Played

In Constitution Hall, Zino Francescatti, whose union of virtuosity and poetry takes older listeners back to the days of Ysaye, gave with Artur Balsam a most beautiful reading of the Brahms D minor violin-piano sonata. His tone was persuasively lovely, both delicately suave and dramatically accented, and his perfection of technique was a delight. The next most rewarding work was Milhaud's suite of jigs, sailor song and hornpipes, a newcomer in the recital field. Otherwise the program pursued the conventional course of a Tartini concerto, Saint-Stens' Introduction and Rondo Capriccioso, and Sarasate's Zigeunerweisen.

Mary Fraser, resident soprano, who has given two recitals previously in Phillips Memorial Gallery, sang there again yesterday afternoon with Theodore Schaefer as her sensitive accompanist. Her intelligently chosen and engrossing program, sung with artistic taste and interpretative finesse, began with American composers: John Klein ("Song is so Old" and "Illusion"), Paul Bowles ("David"), Paul Nordov ("Serenade"), Ernst Bacon ("Is There Such a Thing as Day"), Therorode Chanler, ("Wind" and John Carpenter ("Looking-Glass River"). Two more songs in English were "Sleep the Noon" and "Dance to Your Shadow" collected in the Hebrides and arranged by the Scottish composer, Marjory Kennedy-Fraser.

From the old Italian school, Miss Fraser presented a "Prayer" by Francesco Durante and an unfamiliar operatic recitative and aria by Cherubini. These were followed by Gustav Mahler's naive "Ging' heut' Morgan ubers Feld," and three songs ("Dis Fusswaschung," "Von swei Rosen" and "Siehe, auch ich lebe") by the contemporary Finnish composer, Yrjo Kilpinen, who has a fine lyric gift.

Remarkable Mastery

Appearing in the current American Music Festival at the National Gallery of Art last evening, John Kirkpatrick played a piano recital remarkable for keyboard mastery, for artistic keenness in matters of touch and rhythm, and for understanding of the modern idiom. His pianism is of the comprehensive and intuitive quality that makes one take pride in him as a native musician.

The first part of his program of American works began with the first local performance of a finely constructed and wittily phrased Sonata No. 3 in E by Ross Lee Finney, who expresses himself with a fresh and original vocabulary. Heard here for the first time also was the extraordinary sonata, "Concord, Mass., 1840-60," by that pioneer in modernism, Charles Edward Ives, who anticipated in his harmonic and acoustical effects a style which has now become familiar to our younger composers. The four sections of the sonata are tone-portraits of Emerson, Hawthorne, The Alcott Family and Thoreau, and they are amazing in their insight into character.

Edward MacDowell was represented not by one of his great sonatas but by the imaginative and poetic "Woodland Sketches" which are as charming as any of Schumann's similar conceits. The recital closed with a typical showpiece by that once-popular New Orleans composer-pianist, Louis Moreau Gottschalk. A boy prodigy, Gottschilk went to Paris to study and made his debut there in 1844; among the auditors were Chopin and Berlioz, who predicted a brillian future for him. His scintillant variations on patriotic tunes, "The Union," written in 1863, was played by Kirkpatrick with the bravura manner that was probably the composer's.

Mrs. Adell J. Cord

Funeral services for Mrs. Adell J. Cord, 88, District resident for more than 65 years, will be held at 9:30 a. m. tomorrow at her home, 3610 South Dakota ave. ne. Requiem Mass will be held at 10 a. m. in St. Francis DeSales Church and burial will follow in St. Mary's Cemetery.

Mrs. Cord died at her home Saturday morning after a long illness.

She came to Washington from Prince Edward Island, Canada, where she was born. Her husband, the late William P. Cord, was a superintendent of St. Mary's Cemetery. He died in 1928.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Scott Walker of the South Dakota ave. address, and Mrs. Edward S. McMahon, of Chicago; three sons, Henry Cord, of Ardmore, Md.; William Cord, of Washington, and George Cord of Avondale, Md.; 12 grandchildren and nine great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Florence M. Locknane

Funeral services for Mrs. Florence M. Locknane, 86, Washington resident for 40 years, will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow at the W. K. Huntemann funeral home, 5732 Georgia ave. nw. The Rev. R. K. Nevitt of Brightwood Park Methodist Church will officiate. Burial will follow in Washington Memorial Park.

Mrs. Locknane died Saturday at 817 Jefferson st. nw., where she lived with her son, William N. Locknane.

A native of Irvine, Ky., Mrs. Locknane was a member of an old pioneer family which emigrated from Virginia to Kentucky in the Colonial period.

Mrs. Locknane came to Washington with her children in 1906. She was an active member of the Christian Church.

Surviving, in addition to her son William, are two other sons, James M. and Bush W. Locknane, both of Washington; a daughter, Mrs. Charles B. Nelson of Evanston, Ill., and six grandchildren.

Horace Spence

Funeral services for Horace Spence, 64, oldest employe in point of service at the Veterans' Administration, will be held tomorrow at 2 p. m. at St. Mark's Episcopal Church. Burial will be at Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Spence, who lived at 28 Lincoln ave., Takoma Park, Md., died Friday at Atlantic City, N. J.

A native of Washington, he attended District public schools before going to work for the Southern Railroad, of which his father had been an official.

In 1917 he began his 29 years of service with the Veterans' Administration, known then as the Bureau of War Risks Insurance.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ida M. Spence; three sisters, Mrs. Eva MacNamee, Mrs. Edna Kaiser and Miss Natalie Spence; two brothers, William and Thomas Spence, all of Washington; two daughters, Mrs. Sue Marie Kassler, Rockville, Md., and Mrs. Francis Shinner, Washington; and four sons, Horace B. Spence, Germantown, Md., Labarre, Maurice and Lieut. Adolphus Spence, all of Washington.

overseas relief, at the morning service. He said there was more to come. Church members are being asked to sacrifice every day during the famine emergency, said Dr. Hurst.

Eat Peanut Butter

After morning services at the Friends Meeting House, 13th and Irving sts. nw., a group of worshippers had a meal of peanut butter, crackers and milk. Funds thus saved will go to the American Friends Service Committee.

Most congregations followed a let-your-conscience-be-your-guide policy regarding the sacrificial observance. For example, some folks gave up their Sunday supper—like the Rev. J. Lloyd Black. He is chairman of the Washington Protestant Emergency Overseas Relief Committee, the Federation of Churches and incoming pastor of Ninth Street Christian Church, 9th and D sts. nw.

Lawrence C. Staples, executive secretary of All Souls' Unitarian Church, 16th and Harvard sts. nw., and his family yesterday had cornflakes and milk for dinner. Staples reported that "about $500" was raised at the service to buy food for Europe, bringing to $1200 the fund currently available for that purpose at All Souls' Church.

The Rev. Orris G. Robinson, pastor of Calvary Methodist Church, reported last night that his congregation had collected 3 tons of food for Europe.

To stimulate interest in the food drive, UNRRA films were shown in the All Souls' Sunday School sessions. Mrs. Harold H. Burton, wife of the Supreme Court Justice, is honorary chairman of the food drive committee for the congregation, and Arthur F. Jackson, church treasurer, is general chairman. The church has collected approximately 40 tons of food for Europe, and is shipping it through UNRRA.

Working Through UNRRA

The Rev. Mr. Black of the Protestant overseas committee, sponsors of "Sacrificial Sunday," is urging churches to send large quantities of food and clothing through UNRRA, and small amounts through the Washington City Church of the Brethren, 4th st. and North Carolina ave. se.

Persons who are not contributing toward overseas relief through their own denomination can send funds through the Federation of Churches, 1751 N st. nw., or the UNRRA offices here, according to Mr. Black.

All Lenten self-denial offerings at Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, are being devoted to Lutheran world relief, it was announced yesterday by the Rev. L. Ralph Tabor, pastor. The congregation aims to raise at least $6500 for that purpose by Easter, he said. Lutheran World Relief, Inc., representing seven major Lutheran bodies, is appealing for two million pounds of clothing and bedding for suffering and destitute Europeans.

Canned Food Drive Will Begin Today

A drive to collect canned foods will begin today and extend through Easter, in Washington Protestant churches. It will be sponsored by the Protestant Emergency Overseas Relief Committee of the Federation of Churches.

300 Cameras Prove Success In A-Bomb Dress Rehearsal

Roswell, N. Mex., March 17 (U.P.).—The full-dress rehearsal of "operation crossroads" held off the coast of southern California Friday afternoon resulted in successful tests of the battery of cameras that will make the forthcoming atomic bomb explosion the most photographed event in history, it was disclosed today.

Lieut. Col. Richard S. Leghorn, deputy commander of the photo group, revealed that more than 300 cameras of every known type have been installed in the B-29s and C-54 planes to record the atomic blast. Now tested, they are ready for the job.

Simultaneously it was announced that several more rehearsals will be held before actual "T-time"—the code expression for the actual explosion at Bikini Atoll in May when a B-29 will drop a bomb of the Nagasaki type over a fleet of 97 ships.

Army experts directing trading for "operations crossroads," official designation for the joint Army-Navy test, today made public full details of the camera equipment which is ready to record the explosion for science and history.

Three banks of cameras have been installed in the left side of two C-54s. They will be broadside to the atomic blast, as will several of the B-29s. At least two additional ships will circle the blast scene to drop scientific instruments.

Critics Acclaim 'Miss Y,' New Radio Mystery Pianist

San Francisco, March 17 (AP).—A comely, dark-haired girl in her early twenties, identified only as "Miss Y," made her debut as a concert pianist and radio performer at a symposium on the musical therapy treatment for mental disorders today.

Physicians who observed the performance, the music critics at hand and the radio station staff said it was an unqualified success.

"Miss Y" is a patient at the Langley Porter Psychiatric Clinic of the University of California Medical School. She was afflicted with an emotional disturbance a year ago, it was explained.

Dr. Karl Bowman, director of the clinic, explained that musical therapy is one of many treatments used, but one which has developed a definite niche in the correction of mental and emotional cases. He warned that although great good can be done with the proper use of music, improper use can result in equally great harm.

Unlike "Mr. X," the "mad pianist," whose broadcast from a Detroit studio last week received world wide attention, "Miss Y" knew she was on the air.

"Miss Y's" teacher, Miss Margaret Tilly, also explained that her pupil was in a different category than "Mr. X," in not having been a musician before her illness. However, by the use of musical therapy, Miss Tilly added, the girl was started on the road to health and a deep interest in musical performance developed.

Reds Near U. S. In Atom Skill

New York, March 17 (AP).—Dr. Harlow Shapley, director of the Harvard Observatories, said on his arrival from Europe today he believed the Rusians "know all we know about atomic energy" but they "are still behind in technical know-how, and that's just a matter of time."

"I feel confident," he said, "that the Rusians are working actively in the development and production of atomic energy for nonmilitary use and presumably for military uses also."

Millegan Given Legion of Merit For War Service

The Legion of Merit "for exceptionally meritorious conduct in the performance of outstanding services in the Pacific Area," has been awarded to Lieut. Lloyd S. Millegan, 27, AUS.

Lieut. Millegan

Lieutenant Millegan, who just returned from overseas and is on terminal leave in Washington, will live in Fairfax, Va., with his wife and 3-year-old son.

Lieutenant Millegan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guy J. Millegan of Tacoma, Wash., specialized in Far Eastern research and studied at American University here. He was instructor at National Training School for Boys in Washington and worked in the legislative reference division of the Library of Congress and for the Coordinator of Information, which later became the Office of Strategic Services.

Entering the Army in September, 1943, he went overseas as assistant to the late Joseph Ralston Hayden, adviser on Philippine Affairs to General MacArthur. With headquarters in Australia, he accomplished several special missions in intelligence service, went ashore at Leyte during the first week of the invasion and was active in counter-intelligence work in the Philippines, China and Japan.

Blazing Bomber At Airport Was Only Fire Drill

A blazing B-24 bomber at Washington National Airport alarmed nearby residents and motorists yesterday—but it was only a realistic fire drill.

The fuselage of the old plane was ignited at the north end of the field after oil and gasoline were poured over it. Members of the 67-man fire department raced to the blazing plane as columns of smoke billowed up over the airport.

The fire was brought under control within a few minutes, and the skeleton of the plane will be kept to be used in future tests which will probably also startle nearby residents and deluge telephone switchboards of the airport with calls.

Honor Medal Given To GI Posthumously

New York, March 17 (U.P.).—The Congressional Medal of Honor was presented posthumously today to Pfc. Joseph F. Merrell, of Staten Island, N. Y., for "a gallant one-man attack against vastly superior enemy forces" near Lohe, Germany, in April, 1945.

Merrell, a scout with the Third Infantry (Marne) Division, with his unit was pinned down by heavy enemy fire. On his own initiative, Merrell began a singlehanded assault with hand grenades, storming the enemy positions and killing 23 men before he himself was killed.

Chicago and Northern Illinois . . . a Great Financial Center

Chicago ranks as the third financial center of the world.

Debits of reporting banks here amounted to 75 billion dollars in 1945. With deposits of approximately 9 billion dollars, the banks in Chicago and Northern Illinois are prepared today to meet the financial requirements of any sound enterprise.

War production greatly increased the financial importance of this area and provided a broader base for future expansion. Here the Federal Government itself invested more than a billion dollars in new plants and equipment—more than in any other industrial area. Most of these modern, efficient facilities are now occupied and active in peacetime production.

Neither the war—nor the peace—subjected Chicago and Northern Illinois to the industrial dislocations experienced by many other sections of the nation. For reconversion to peace, 93 per cent of industry required few production changes.

To the needs of producers and distributors of goods, bankers of Chicago and Northern Illinois today bring the traditional vision and knowledge which have been important factors in the growth of this trade center. These commercial and investment bankers are organized to provide the resources and special service to meet sound financial requirements of all industry developing within this area.

Industry finds here the people and the facilities to help solve its financial problems, whether the need be for additional working capital, funded securities, or equity money through sale of stock. Here are located the main offices of many of the nation's most active underwriters and distributors of investment securities. In 1945 issues underwritten by these firms totalled approximately a third of all corporate and municipal debt obligations in the United States.

Bankers in Chicago and Northern Illinois will not only handle the underwritings of large and small business, but will provide accurate, up-to-the-minute information on your export problems, advise you concerning your investment portfolio, and act in varied trust capacities.

For your long range future, this evenly balanced economic area, the center of all Middle Western trade, provides outstanding advantages. You are invited to investigate them in detail, and to call upon us for factual and confidential information. This service is without charge.

Industries locating in this area have these outstanding advantages • Railroad Center of the United States • World Airport • Inland Waterways • Geographical Center of U. S. ## This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Havana, Cuba, March 17.—Ossie Bluege says he is completely undisturbed by recent sports writers' predictions that his Nats will be a second-division club this year, nor is he bothered at all by the pre-pennant race odds which labels the Nats as fifth choice.

POVICH

"They picked us to finish seventh last season and we were beaten for the pennant only a game and a half," said Bluege. "What they say about us in March doesn't bother me. I am concerned about what they'll be saying about us in September. That's when you can be sure of what kind of a ball club you have."

Bluege says he thinks his Washington club is being underrated. "To read what those baseball writers are saying, you'd think that we didn't get anybody back from the armed services. You'd think the war was fought by Joe DiMaggio, Joe Gordon, Phil Rizzuto and Bill Dickey of the Yanks, and Ted Williams, Johnny Pesky, Ted Hughson and Dom DiMaggio of the Red Sox, along with some Detroit Tigers. We had some pretty good ball players in the service, too, and now that they're back, we ought to be a much better ball club than last season. Fellows like Cecil Travis, Buddy Lewis, Gerry Priddy, Jake Early, Walter Masterson and Rae Scarborough were starring in prewar baseball along with the DiMaggios and the Williamses. We're going to be better than just a wartime club."

Bluege liked what he saw of the Nats on their 10-day Havana trip. They broke even with the Red Sox in two games and then licked the Cuban All-Stars in five straights. He doubts if any of the clubs in Florida were facing any better opposition than the Cubans gave the Nats here.

"Those Cuban pitchers showed us more than we would have seen playing big league games in Florida. They have been pitching all winter, and I daresay my batting order saw more fast balls and better curves than the hitters in Florida were getting. That's a big help at this stage of training."

It is the hitting of the Nats that accounts for most of Bluege's enthusiasm. What has been called his top-heavy left-handed batting order did all right against the southpaw pitching it saw here.

Bluege admits that the Nats still aren't one of the power teams in the league, "but down the line we ought to be one of the better hitting teams," he says. "I wouldn't bet that any four hitters on any other club will show a better aggregate average than Travis, Lewis, Spence and Vernon, and if Jeff Heath has a good year, that gives us five hitters who are tougher than any other five on any other team."

The Nats' manager freely admits that Mickey Vernon has clinched the first-base job in his battle with Joe Kuhel. "I know Vernon has been hitting the ball hard for us, but I just figured it up that he has made 16 hits in 37 times at bat thus far, and I can believe what they said about how tough a man he was to get out when he was playing in the Pacific with Navy teams. Vernon will give us that long ball every once in a while, too."

Bluege was literally beaming after today's fifth straight victory over the Cuban All-Stars. An old infielder himself, he knows the importance of double plays, and he had seen the Gerry Priddy-Cecil Travis second-base combination make three rapid-fire double plays during the afternoon. "That's where we're going to be stronger," said Bluege. "In the middle of our infield we haven't had a good double-play pair in three years. Priddy and Travis will be one of the best. I was a third baseman myself, but I never did consider that the most important position in the infield was second base. Priddy is close to being the best in the league and Travis always has been an underrated shortstop."

The big bugaboo in Bluege's infield scheme still is third base, where rookie Sherry Robinson had alternately been adequate and incompetent. Bluege declares, however, that he is detecting more surehandedness in Robertson's defensive play and is refusing to be panicked at this time by the absence of a veteran third sacker. Anyway, he is hopeful that Robertson's hitting ability will offset any deficient fielding. He likes his outfield, Bluege says, but he isn't going to temporize with any outfielder who goes into a hitting or fielding slump.

"At the first sign that we aren't getting a good job from one of our regular outfielders, you're going to see young Gil Coan getting his job, and there's a possibility too that they may never get Coan out of our regular outfield. Heath, Spence and Lewis will have to hustle to keep their regular jobs, I think."

1000 Negroes Watch Hitless First Effort by Robinson

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 17 (U.P.).—For the first time in the history of southern baseball training, a Negro participated in an exhibition game today when Jackie Robinson played second base for Montreal as the International Leaguers lost to the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7 to 2.

More than 4000 fans turned out for the game, including 1000 Negroes, who overflowed the "Jim Crow" section making it necessary for about 200 of them to stand back of the right field foul line.

Robinson, former U. C. L. A. four-sport star, played six innings, failing to get a hit. He reached first base on a force play in the sixth inning, stole second and later scored. He was applauded on each appearance at the plate.

The Dodgers' four runs in the first inning came on Dixie Walker's triple behind three successive bases on balls. Eddie Chandler pitched the first seven innings for the Dodgers, yielding both runs in the sixth.

Seven Other Trackmen Penalized

Stockholm, March 17 (AP).—Gunder Hagg, the world's fastest miler who twice toured the United States in 1943 and 1945, and his Swedish countryman, Arne Andersson, the world's second fastest miler, were declared professionals today and barred from amateur competition for life.

In announcing the action after a two-day secret conference on an island in Lake Maelar, the Swedish Athletic Association board did not disclose the amount of money Hagg and Anderson were accused of receiving for races, but a reliable private source told the Associated Press they acknowledged receiving 40,000 crowns (approximately $10,000) when asked to make a report to the association.

(In New York, Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the AAU, who handled Hagg's United States tours, said Hagg received only $1 a day for incidental expenses while in the United States, but that, of course, the AAU paid for his meals, hotels and transportation.)

Records Stand

Bo Lindman, chairman of the board, said the records of Hagg and Andersson will continue to stand in the Swedish record books. Hagg set seven world standards, including the 4:01.4 for the mile and 3:43 for the 1500 meters. Andersson, who previously held the mile mark of 4:01.6 before Hagg bettered it last July, is the holder of three-quarter mile record of 2:56.6.

Whether the International Amateur Federation will allow the records to remain in the books still was open to question but Swedish sportsmen pointed to the case of Paavo Nurmi as a precedent. The famed Flying Finn was barred by the I. A. A. F. but his records were allowed to stand.

Seven other Swedish runners, but not as internationally known as Hagg and Anderson, were penalized as the board climaxed months of investigation after the charges first came into the open last November.

The other seven runners involved are:

Henry Kaelarne, an outstanding middle-distance runner of the 1930's, now retired and working as a fireman. He also was declared a professional and barred from amateur competition for life.

Suspended for two years: Bror Hellsstroem, Goestra Jacobson and Aake Spaangert. Hellstroem and Jacobson are long-distance runners, Spaangert, a middle-distance man.

Out for Year

Suspended for one year: Arne Ahlsen, Hans Liljevist and Sven Malmberg, all middle-distance runners.

All other Swedish athletes involved in the investigation, reported by the Swedish press as between 30 and 40, were cleared because of "insufficient proof" they had violated amateur rules.

The action of the board apparently came as no surprise to Hagg. Only yesterday he declared "I will not be surprised if I . . . am condemned." He added he was convinced there were very few 100 per cent amateurs.

Andersson, a school teacher who at one time also held the world 1500-meter mark at 3:45 before Hagg broke it, also had expected the action. After appearing before the board yesterday he said he would continue to train and, if barred, "I would be very interested in making a tour of Russia with Hagg."

Bo Lindman, chairman of the board, declared after the announcement "I hope this will teach Swedish athletes not to behave like fools."

Twelve members of the 13-man board voted for the ban. The thirteenth member, Olle Hallberg, did not participate, the announcement said because he "expressed a desire to resign from the board."

Newton Cox Returns To Maryland University

Maj. Newton Cox, who hung up a Southern Conference middleweight boxing championship while a member of the University of Maryland team from 1937 to 1940, is back on the campus for ROTC duty.

Prior to going overseas, Cox acted as athletic instructor at Camp Croft, S. C., taught physical training at Fort Benning, Ga., and played on the Benning baseball team.

Tigers' Evers Breaks Ankle, Out 14 Weeks

Lakeland, Fla., March 17 (AP).—Hoot Evers, rookie center fielding sensation of the Detroit Tigers, suffered a broken left ankle and a fractured right thumb today as the world champions lost their seventh straight Grapefruit League game, 8 to 3, to Cleveland.

Evers was trying to beat a force play at second base in the seventh inning when his spikes caught as he started to slide. Shortstop Jack Conway's throw to first then struck the Tiger player's thumb as he raised his hand to protect his face.

He was carried from the field and rushed to Morrell Memorial Hospital, where doctors said Evers' ankle would be in a cast six to eight weeks and that he would be unable to play for 12 or 14 weeks.

Evers' average in eight exhibition games is .406 and he has hit safely at least once in every game.

Cleveland hopped Fred Hutchinson for five runs, three unearned, in the second frame, and coasted to victory.

Fogel Duplicates Freak Golf Shot; Partners Stunned

The thought that freak golf shots are accidents was disproved at Prince Georges Country Club yesterday by Capt. Jim Fogel, playing in a threesome with First Lieut. R. L. Moseley and Capt. Harry LeHeuarex.

On the fourteenth hole, a 403-yard par four, Capt. Fogel hit his second shot into the woods to the right of the green, about 40 yards from the cup. Although he could barely see the green, he took out an eight iron and promptly smacked the ball into the cup for a birdie three.

Fogel was a trifle perturbed as his playing partners insisted his shot was all luck so he told them he had practiced similar shots diligently and could do it again. He took their dare and defied name-your-own odds by placing another ball in the same spot and—you guessed it—holing the practice shot right behind the original.

Sam Snead's 274 Tops Demaret in Jax Open

Jacksonville, Fla., March 17 (AP).—Sam Snead, playing perhaps the steadiest golf of his career, slammed aside torrid competition today to win the $10,000 Jacksonville Open Golf Tournament by four strokes.

The long-driving pro from the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia had to fight soggy fairways and a galloping Jimmy Demaret all the way. He wound up the 72 holes with a 24-under-par 264, carding 67 during the morning round and 67 in the afternoon. Snead collected $2000.

Demaret of Houston, Tex., took second place with 268 and Pete Cooper of Gainesville, Fla., came in third with 271. Lawson Little of Monterey, Calif., was fourth with 274.

Demaret Steamed

Demaret, the Beau Brummell of the touring pros, played sensational golf during the third round. He racked up a nine under par 63 to set a new record for the 6272 yard Brentwood course.

At the half-way mark Snead led Henry Picard of Oklahoma City by six strokes and Demaret lagged three strokes further back. With that lead, The Slammer obviously realized that caution would pay off better than brilliance. He studied every shot and spent half of his time on the green flicking away pine needles so his putts wouldn't go astray.

The Virginia strong boy started the day by carding a birdie on the 340-yard par four first hole and another on the 351-yard par five second, where he missed an eagle by a turn of the ball on a 30-foot putt. From there on in he was close to the pin on most of his approaches, and deadly accurate on his putts.

Southern Tennis Title to Van Horn

Miami Beach, Fla., March 17 (AP). Welby Van Horn today won the Southern Professional Tennis Championship in a gruelling five-set match with Frankie Kovacs of San Francisco, 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 7-9, 6-4.

The match lasted four and a half hours and prevented the scheduled doubles title match, which will be played Tuesday.

Two AAU Fives Post 96-Point Record Totals

Denver, March 17 (U.P.).—The Phillips "66" Oilers of Bartlesville, Okla., and Denver's Ambrose Jellymakers set a high scoring record for the National AAU Basketball tournament today, downing their first round opponents with identical winning scores of 96 points.

Phillips overran Torrington, Wyo., 96-19 with their traditional sharpshooting plus a remarkable defense. Ambrose downed a spunky but outclassed Red Lodge, Mont., quintet 96-49.

A first round card loaded with 64 topflight cage squads from Virginia to the Hawaiian Islands sent the biggest AAU tourney in American basketball history on its way in two Denver gyms.

Other tournament results:

Sacramento (Calif.) Junior College, 75; Highlands University, Las Vegas, N. Mex., 13.
Casper (Wyo.) Western Oil Teelers, 63; Treasure Island, Calif., 42.

Welterweights Added to Ring Card Tuesday

Welterweights Artie Brown and Joe Davis have been added to the supporting card of tomorrow night's ring show at Turner's Arena, which will feature a 10-rounder between Bee Bee Washington and Jimmy Mandell. The bout is listed for five heats.

Other prelims are Ken Stribling vs. Manual Ross, middleweights, six rounds; Ben Davis vs. B. Z. Washington, welterweights, four rounds; B-29 Banks vs. Eddie Lyles, lightweights, four rounds, and George Espina vs. Billy Danker, welterweights, four rounds.

Much interest has been evinced in the Mandell-Washington bout, which is the third meeting between the pair. Bee Bee won the first, while the second, last month, ended in a draw.

The card starts at 8:45 p. m.

Calvert Extended In Parochial Play

Five teams advanced to the third round of the Parochial School Invitation tournament yesterday at St. John's with only Calvert, which was pressed to the last minute to defeat Our Lady of Lourdes, 25-24, extended.

In other games, Immaculate Conception defeated St. Martin, 21-10, St. Stephen won, 20-8, over Our Lady of Victory, Blessed Sacrament drubbed Holy Name, 30-16, and St. Dominic scored over St. Teresa, 24-18.

Nats Win 5th Straight Over Cuban All-Stars

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Havana, Cuba, March 17.—Stan Spence broke out of his Havana hitting slump with a three-run homer that touched off a 10-6 victory for the Nats today, their fifth straight over the Cuban All-Stars.

Spence swatted his homer with two out and Cecil Travis and Mickey Vernon on base at a time when the Nats were trailing the Cubans, 2-1, in the sixth inning it was a line drive over the right field wall off Pitcher George Comellas.

The 3500 Havana fans watched in dismay as the Nats staged an 11-hit batting display that included a home run and a triple by Buddy Lewis, and four doubles in addition to Spence's wallop.

Mickey Vernon took down the batting honors with four hits in four appearances, two of them doubles. Walter Masterson and Max Wilson gave up 12 hits to the Cubans but were helped out of situations by Cecil Travis and Gerry Priddy, who engineered three fast double plays.

Masterson gave up only two hits and no runs until the sixth inning.

The Nats staged a six-run seventh inning with the help of four bases on balls and two-baggers by Wilson and Bruce Campbell.

Buddy Lewis' third-inning homer that put the Nats in a 1-0 lead was a long line drive over the right field wall.

The Nats move out of Havana by plane tomorrow morning, making close connections in time for a game with the Giants in Miami in the afternoon. Their share of the gate in the Cuban games here amounted to nearly $10,000 representing a $5000 profit.

Gil Torres has permission to remain in Havana for a few days because of his wife's illness, but four other Cubans will return to Florida with the Nats.

Big Plans . . .

Griff Gets Cordial With Mexican Boss

Havana, March 17 (U.P.).—Owner Clark Griffith of the Washington Senators, in the first concrete move toward solution of the budding U. S.-Mexican baseball war, announced today he would present to the big leaguers' next meeting a plan for convocation of an inter-American Professional Baseball Congress to be composed of representatives of all countries where professional baseball is played.

The congress was suggested by Luis Orlando Rodriguez, Cuban sports director, during a conference with Griffith and Bernardo Pasquel, executive in the new eight-team Mexican League. Griffith had refused to confer with Pasquel during this afternoon's game between the Senators and the Cuban All-Stars but Rodriquez got them together this evening and proposed his idea which Griffith immediately indorsed.

"I can't speak for all baseball," Griffith said, "but I'll certainly be glad to present the idea to organized baseball in my country."

Rodriquez proposed Havana as site of the congress and Pasquel agreed and said he would present the plan to his league when he returns to Mexico City.

Griffith, who previously had been bitter about Pasquel's baseball raid on the big leagues, was extremely cordial throughout the meeting and appeared enthusiastic about Rodriquez's plan.

Bears Beaten By Bridgeport Pros, 55 to 49

They forgot to play "The Star Spangled Banner."

That was the alibi of the Washington Bears yesterday when they went down to a 55-49 defeat at the hands of the Bridgeport Newfields before a capacity crowd at Turner's Arena.

The visitors not only were speedier than the Bears at their best, but their agility and youth also helped tell the tale.

Rochester Captures Eastern Pro Playoffs

Rochester, N. Y., March 17 (AP).—The Rochester Royal ended Fort Wayne's two-year domination of the National Basketball League playoffs by blasting the Zollners, 70 to 54, before a turnaway crowd of 3800 in the Sports Arena here last night.

Pieces of Haight -- Home, Sweet and Hectic Home

Marietta Park, D. C.

Dear Boss,

I got home just in time for hotcakes and sausage, Boss, so you can tell the peanut butter sandwich factories they can ease up on production. It was a great homecoming. When I went up to the door, the newsboy hit me in the back of the head with the morning paper and the married woman I live with hit me in the face with last month's bills.

HAIGHT

If she had done like the boys at Bunker Hill, and waited until she saw the whites of my eyes, she wouldn't have fired yet, if you know what I mean. Of course, she expected me to lay my bankroll on the table, but instead, I presented her with two souvenir coins from the International Monetary Conference and she said, "Those and $12.85 will get our phone off the 'temporarily disconnected' list."

My darling daughter rushed up and asked, "What did you bring me, Pop?" I replied, "Nothing but myself." And she came back with, "Gypped again."

Our star boarder looked me over and remarked, "So you're back," and then under her breath she muttered, "Looks like I'll be getting the second-best pork chop again."

Mary, the maid, left the room and reappeared to play me a solo on our big-mouthed vacuum cleaner. The others laughed and I frowned for business reasons, but to tell the truth, she looked better to me than Gypsy Rose Lee plucking a guitar.

The little girl from down the street came in and I suspect she has had some more coaching from her mother for she said, "Oh, I see the moon isn't over Miami any more."

Well, Boss, they added another cup of water to the pancake batter and set a place for me at the table. I felt the radiator (it was warm, thank goodness) and sat down to a tasteful breakfast but some untasteful remarks like "You're the first man I ever saw who went to Florida and didn't get sunburned anywhere but on the end of the nose."

That was my fault, Boss, because I had forgot to tell them the story I invented on the way home about a sailfish biting me.

Finally, forced on the defensive, I used my No. 1 tactic of "I've got to go to the office."

Of course, I disliked the prospect of having to elbow my way through the big crowds waiting for me in Post Square, but I decided that was one of the things a celebrity has to endure. So I flexed the fingers of my autograph hand, filled my fountain pen and determined to limit my reply to the welcoming committee to 30 minutes.

Well, Boss, I guess the signals got crossed somewhere and the crowd was waiting for me at the end of the Memorial Bridge because everything was normal in front of The Post Building, just the usual passers-by. However, two young girls stood in front of one of the display windows, looking at another of those big ads about Shirley Povich or Mary Haworth, I figured.

But when I got closer, what to my wondering eyes did appear but a whole window layout devoted to Haight! A big picture of me sitting at a typewriter with a chicken in front of me, a relic of the time I won first prize in Jerry Strong's poultry contest.

I was about to tell the girls it was me, in person, when one said, "Isn't he a mess?" Without thinking I said, "You're right, Lady." And she swung around and snapped, "Who asked you—fat stuff?"

I stood there wondering how the photographer made my $25 suit look like a tailor-made job when three fellows came along. They looked at the window and one said, "That's Haight." Of course, I swelled up, Boss, but I was deflated a moment later when he continued, "Haight won the 1945 egg-laying contest—the hen was second."

As ever,

POUNDS HAIGHT.

P. S.—Boss, why not change the picture to the one of me with the prize hog?

Chandler's Collegiate Attire Startles Minor League Czar

By William Tucker
United Press Sports Writer

New York, March 17 (U.P.).—From pillar to post on the sports beat and watch out for the sharp turns:

The heavyweight fight that New York fans might have had last week will be staged in Detroit March 22 between Tami Mauriello and John Thomas. When Joe Baski had to withdraw from his engagement with Mauriello, Promoter Mike Jacobs thought he could move Jack Kearns' new heavyweight, Joe Maxim, into the breach.

Mauriello

But Maxim dropped an unexpected decision to Thomas in the meanwhile ruling himself out, and Mauriello wanted no part of dangerous Joe Walcott. That left Thomas as the logical substitute but nobody did anything about it and Jacobs came up with a couple of lightweights.

In the trotting horse business, everybody seems to work a double shift. Most drivers are also trainers. Joe Neville, sleepy-eyed but wide awake promoter of the "Little Brown Jug" trotting classic in Delaware, Ohio, doubles as counsel for Orin Duncan and Leon Toole, drivers, who were charged in a trotter stimulation case last summer. . . .

Commissioner Happy Chandler, who has shaken baseball's aged rafters more than once, really rattled the timbers at the winter baseball meeting when he called upon impeccable Judge W. G. Bramham, czar of the minor leagues. Chandler wore a pullover sweater under his coat for the occasion. Bramham and his staff practically fainted. When Joe Engel, the old Washington pitcher, now operating at Chattanooga, heard of the incident he promptly bought the loudest sweater he could find and mailed it to Judge Bramham for Christmas. . . .

Billy Eck of Allentown, Pa., who won the middleweight championship of the European theater of operations and then grew into a heavyweight, vowed he would quit the ring after a recent opponent, Nat Hines, died of injuries received in the bout. But Eck is now shaking off the effects of the tragedy and may take up an offer to go to South Africa for a guarantee of $1000 a fight. There's gold above ground for American boxers in Johannesburg.

Everybody hopes that Kenneth Bailey, the fantastic Briton who has run something like 85,000 miles in nightly jaunts along the English south coast, will show well in the Boston Marathon next month. He kept up his lonely 100-mile trot throughout the war, with a few GIs keeping him company now and then. . . .

Chunky Chet Laabs, whose bat powered the St. Louis Browns into the 1944 World Series, was the second man ever to clear the center-field fence in Los Angeles' Gilmore Stadium when he clouted one in the recent major league All-Star game. Chet, we understand, is indignant because he has to pay 25 cents an hour for baby-sitters in his Detroit home. If he knows where we can find one at that price in New York, we will send a self-addressed, stamped envelope. . . .

The same experts who taught Cornel Wilde to shoot like the son of Robin Hood will demonstrate the bow and arrow technique to the press Tuesday on Macy's roof. And if you thought Cornel was Wilde . . .

All Records Smashed at Santa Anita

Arcadia, Calif., March 17 (AP).—Colossal is the word for the 55-day race meeting which ended at Santa Ainta yesterday.

Attendance and wagering totals hit peaks believed unequalled by any meeting of similar length. Including a top crowd of 80,200 for the Santa Anita handicap, attendance totaled 1,826,291, an average of 33,217 daily. The part-mutuel take came to 140,686,541, a daily play of $2,557,936.

Two four-million days, California's first, brightened the cash windows. The handicap day take of $4,601,461 was tops. Closing day wagering crossed $4,473,041.

The meeting produced three world record performances among eight new track records. Snow Boots ran a mile and one sixteenth in 1:41 3/5 for one mark, while Don Conejo and Distaff both reeled off three furlongs in :32 3/5.

Horsewomen were in the limelight as Miss Ethel Mills' War Knight won the big handicap and Mrs. Elizabeth Arden Graham's Knockdown took the $10,000 Derby. But the leading money winner was Louis D. Mayer, whose steeds earned $174,285. Mrs. Graham was second, with $133,960.

On closing day, Fred Astaire's Triplicate romped off with a five-length victory in the $50,000 mile and a half San Juan Capistrano Handicap.

Stakes and purses totaled $2,464,250, making it by far the highest money meeting ever held. Fifteen stakes carried $675,000 in extra awards.

First Fiddle was rated the top handicap horse, despite his nose out by War Knight in the big 'cap, but Armstrong Stable's Holly Tree, winner of six of seven races, was the most consistent steed.

Armstrong Stable saddled most winners, 20, to Mayer's 19.

California thoroughbreds came into their own, meeting and exchanging wins with some of the East's best. California-bred horses won 182 races, for earnings of about $825,000.

Racing's Cleanup Man Hits Hard After Sleeper Period

By Davis J. Walsh
International News Service

Miami, March 16 (INS).—After months of amiable ineritia, the new head copper for the sport of kings, Spencer (FBI-Man) Drayton, is suddenly in action today in the Miami area and a Nation of horse track people are awaiting, rather uneasily, the next move.

Nobody can even faintly surmise the nature of this move, or where in the pattern of winter racing its swift impact might be felt. But all are agreed on one point.

The last move was drastic enough to impress everyone with the possibility that the new guy might new be ready to play a rattling good game of cops and robbers with the supposed bamboozlers of the stable area.

The last move, to be precise, placed a groom, James Newton, under arrest by Dade County authorities. He won't be tried by racing people. Instead, he'll be given a preliminary hearing in civil court next week on charges of violating a State law which forbids the stimulation of race horses, under pain of heavy penalties.

So little had happened, in fact that the stable area may have been lulled into a sense of fancied security. For its habitues even spoke ironically of the fact that a trainer, suspended for horse doping elsewhere, was said to be operating openly in Miami.

Housecleaning

But the Old Westbury case has changed all that to a point where trainers were hurriedly cleaning their closets today of all manner of soothing syrups, bunion softeners, staycomb, rough-on-rats, denture-stick—anything that might be held suspect of containing forbidden properties.

Up to 10 Years

One law provides a fine of $1000 to $5000. Another would cause the violator to do his roadwork henceforth on the end of a chain for a period ranging from 1 to 10 years. A conviction in this case—the first stimulation episode to come up under the Drayton aegis—would prove a powerful deterrent, horsemen cencede, to the needle and capsule boys all over the racing wheel.

In other words, the present situation is more than a test of guilt or innocence of a groom, accused of administering benzedrine to Old Westbury in the second race at Tropical Park last Saturday. It goes further than a question of culpability on the part of Trainer Clarence Reynolds, who stands suspended for the balance of the race meeting.

It's a real HAVANA CIGAR

The Fragrance That Pleases Everyone

There's a reason why a genuine imported Havana cigar merits the distinction of being overwhelmingly preferred by discriminating smokers in all parts of the world. First off, only on the island of Cuba can you find the right combination of soil and climate which produces the perfect tobaccos that go into a real Havana cigar. And only in Cuba do you get the know-how of skilled craftsmen with generations of cigar making experience handed down from father to son. That's why you get the ultimate in smoking pleasure when you light up an imported Havana cigar. And that's why men who know tobacco insist on buying genuine Havana cigars.

WE NEED FARM MACHINERY
LABOR WANTS TO PRODUCE IT!
LET'S GET GOING!

The following resolution was unanimously adopted March 6, 1946, at the convention of the National Farmers Union, meeting in Topeka, Kansas

WHEREAS: The International Harvester Company has refused to accept the recommendations of the Government Fact-Finding Panel to end the strike in their ten plants unless they are given a commitment by OPA that the Company will be allowed to raise substantially the price of farm machinery; and

WHEREAS: The United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers (CIO) has accepted the Panel Report as the basis for an immediate return to work and the resumption of production of farm machinery; and

WHEREAS: The policy of the Government properly refuses to trade wage increases for price increase, but does make due allowance for relief of hardships imposed by increases approved by the Wage Stabilization Board; and

WHEREAS: Other farm equipment companies are taking a position similar to that of International Harvester, thus threatening an even more acute shortage of farm machinery; and

WHEREAS: Farmers are in desperate need of farm machinery,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED:

That this Convention of the National Farmers Union does hereby urge the government to seize struck farm machinery plants, put into effect the Fact-Finding Panel's recommendations, and immediately resume production of farm machinery under government seizure until such time as the International Harvester Company is willing to resume uninterrupted private operation.

—With Shirley Povich

Havana, Cuba, March 17.—Ossie Bluege says he is completely undisturbed by recent sports writers' predictions that his Nats will be a second-division club this year, nor is he bothered at all by the pre-pennant race odds which labels the Nats as fifth choice.

POVICH

"They picked us to finish seventh last season and we were beaten for the pennant only a game and a half," said Bluege. "What they say about us in March doesn't bother me. I am concerned about what they'll be saying about us in September. That's when you can be sure of what kind of a ball club you have."

Bluege says he thinks his Washington club is being underrated. "To read what those baseball writers are saying, you'd think that we didn't get anybody back from the armed services. You'd think the war was fought by Joe DiMaggio, Joe Gordon, Phil Rizzuto and Bill Dickey of the Yanks, and Ted Williams, Johnny Pesky, Ted Hughson and Dom DiMaggio of the Red Sox, along with some Detroit Tigers. We had some pretty good ball players in the service, too, and now that they're back, we ought to be a much better ball club than last season. Fellows like Cecil Travis, Buddy Lewis, Gerry Priddy, Jake Early, Walter Masterson and Rae Scarborough were starring in prewar baseball along with the DiMaggios and the Williamses. We're going to be better than just a wartime club."

Bluege liked what he saw of the Nats on their 10-day Havana trip. They broke even with the Red Sox in two games and then licked the Cuban All-Stars in five straights. He doubts if any of the clubs in Florida were facing any better opposition than the Cubans gave the Nats here.

"Those Cuban pitchers showed us more than we would have seen playing big league games in Florida. They have been pitching all winter, and I daresay my batting order saw more fast balls and better curves than the hitters in Florida were getting. That's a big help at this stage of training."

It is the hitting of the Nats that accounts for most of Bluege's enthusiasm. What has been called his top-heavy left-handed batting order did all right against the southpaw pitching it saw here.

Bluege admits that the Nats still aren't one of the power teams in the league, "but down the line we ought to be one of the better hitting teams," he says. "I wouldn't bet that any four hitters on any other club will show a better aggregate average than Travis, Lewis, Spence and Vernon, and if Jeff Heath has a good year, that gives us five hitters who are tougher than any other five on any other team."

The Nats' manager freely admits that Mickey Vernon has clinched the first-base job in his battle with Joe Kuhel. "I know Vernon has been hitting the ball hard for us, but I just figured it up that he has made 16 hits in 37 times at bat thus far, and I can believe what they said about how tough a man he was to get out when he was playing in the Pacific with Navy teams. Vernon will give us that long ball every once in a while, too."

Bluege was literally beaming after today's fifth straight victory over the Cuban All-Stars. An old infielder himself, he knows the importance of double plays, and he had seen the Gerry Priddy-Cecil Travis second-base combination make three rapid-fire double plays during the afternoon. "That's where we're going to be stronger," said Bluege. "In the middle of our infield we haven't had a good double-play pair in three years. Priddy and Travis will be one of the best. I was a third baseman myself, but I never did consider that the most important position in the infield was second base. Priddy is close to being the best in the league and Travis always has been an underrated shortstop."

The big bugaboo in Bluege's infield scheme still is third base, where rookie Sherry Robinson had alternately been adequate and incompetent. Bluege declares, however, that he is detecting more surehandedness in Robertson's defensive play and is refusing to be panicked at this time by the absence of a veteran third sacker. Anyway, he is hopeful that Robertson's hitting ability will offset any deficient fielding. He likes his outfield, Bluege says, but he isn't going to temporize with any outfielder who goes into a hitting or fielding slump.

"At the first sign that we aren't getting a good job from one of our regular outfielders, you're going to see young Gil Coan getting his job, and there's a possibility too that they may never get Coan out of our regular outfield. Heath, Spence and Lewis will have to hustle to keep their regular jobs, I think."

Seven Other Trackmen Penalized

Stockholm, March 17 (AP).—Gunder Hagg, the world's fastest miler who twice toured the United States in 1943 and 1945, and his Swedish countryman, Arne Andersson, the world's second fastest miler, were declared professionals today and barred from amateur competition for life.

In announcing the action after a two-day secret conference on an island in Lake Maelar, the Swedish Athletic Association board did not disclose the amount of money Hagg and Anderson were accused of receiving for races, but a reliable private source told the Associated Press they acknowledged receiving 40,000 crowns (approximately $10,000) when asked to make a report to the association.

(In New York, Dan Ferris, secretary-treasurer of the AAU, who handled Hagg's United States tours, said Hagg received only $1 a day for incidental expenses while in the United States, but that, of course, the AAU paid for his meals, hotels and transportation.)

Records Stand

Bo Lindman, chairman of the board, said the records of Hagg and Andersson will continue to stand in the Swedish record books. Hagg set seven world standards, including the 4:01.4 for the mile and 3:43 for the 1500 meters. Andersson, who previously held the mile mark of 4:01.6 before Hagg bettered it last July, is the holder of three-quarter mile record of 2:56.6.

Whether the International Amateur Federation will allow the records to remain in the books still was open to question but Swedish sportsmen pointed to the case of Paavo Nurmi as a precedent. The famed Flying Finn was barred by the I. A. A. F. but his records were allowed to stand.

Seven other Swedish runners, but not as internationally known as Hagg and Anderson, were penalized as the board climaxed months of investigation after the charges first came into the open last November.

The other seven runners involved are:

Henry Kaelarne, an outstanding middle-distance runner of the 1930's, now retired and working as a fireman. He also was declared a professional and barred from amateur competition for life.

Suspended for two years: Bror Hellsstroem, Goestra Jacobson and Aake Spaangert. Hellstroem and Jacobson are long-distance runners, Spaangert, a middle-distance man.

Out for Year

Suspended for one year: Arne Ahlsen, Hans Liljevist and Sven Malmberg, all middle-distance runners.

All other Swedish athletes involved in the investigation, reported by the Swedish press as between 30 and 40, were cleared because of "insufficient proof" they had violated amateur rules.

The action of the board apparently came as no surprise to Hagg. Only yesterday he declared "I will not be surprised if I . . . am condemned." He added he was convinced there were very few 100 per cent amateurs.

Andersson, a school teacher who at one time also held the world 1500-meter mark at 3:45 before Hagg broke it, also had expected the action. After appearing before the board yesterday he said he would continue to train and, if barred, "I would be very interested in making a tour of Russia with Hagg."

Bo Lindman, chairman of the board, declared after the announcement "I hope this will teach Swedish athletes not to behave like fools."

Twelve members of the 13-man board voted for the ban. The thirteenth member, Olle Hallberg, did not participate, the announcement said because he "expressed a desire to resign from the board."

Nats Win 5th Straight Over Cuban All-Stars

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Havana, Cuba, March 17.—Stan Spence broke out of his Havana hitting slump with a three-run homer that touched off a 10-6 victory for the Nats today, their fifth straight over the Cuban All-Stars.

Spence swatted his homer with two out and Cecil Travis and Mickey Vernon on base at a time when the Nats were trailing the Cubans, 2-1, in the sixth inning it was a line drive over the right field wall off Pitcher George Comellas.

The 3500 Havana fans watched in dismay as the Nats staged an 11-hit batting display that included a home run and a triple by Buddy Lewis, and four doubles in addition to Spence's wallop.

Mickey Vernon took down the batting honors with four hits in four appearances, two of them doubles. Walter Masterson and Max Wilson gave up 12 hits to the Cubans but were helped out of situations by Cecil Travis and Gerry Priddy, who engineered three fast double plays.

Masterson gave up only two hits and no runs until the sixth inning.

The Nats staged a six-run seventh inning with the help of four bases on balls and two-baggers by Wilson and Bruce Campbell.

Buddy Lewis' third-inning homer that put the Nats in a 1-0 lead was a long line drive over the right field wall.

The Nats move out of Havana by plane tomorrow morning, making close connections in time for a game with the Giants in Miami in the afternoon. Their share of the gate in the Cuban games here amounted to nearly $10,000 representing a $5000 profit.

Gil Torres has permission to remain in Havana for a few days because of his wife's illness, but four other Cubans will return to Florida with the Nats.

Big Plans . . .

Griff Gets Cordial With Mexican Boss

Havana, March 17 (U.P.).—Owner Clark Griffith of the Washington Senators, in the first concrete move toward solution of the budding U. S.-Mexican baseball war, announced today he would present to the big leaguers' next meeting a plan for convocation of an inter-American Professional Baseball Congress to be composed of representatives of all countries where professional baseball is played.

The congress was suggested by Luis Orlando Rodriguez, Cuban sports director, during a conference with Griffith and Bernardo Pasquel, executive in the new eight-team Mexican League. Griffith had refused to confer with Pasquel during this afternoon's game between the Senators and the Cuban All-Stars but Rodriquez got them together this evening and proposed his idea which Griffith immediately indorsed.

"I can't speak for all baseball," Griffith said, "but I'll certainly be glad to present the idea to organized baseball in my country."

Rodriquez proposed Havana as site of the congress and Pasquel agreed and said he would present the plan to his league when he returns to Mexico City.

Griffith, who previously had been bitter about Pasquel's baseball raid on the big leagues, was extremely cordial throughout the meeting and appeared enthusiastic about Rodriquez's plan.

Tigers' Evers Breaks Ankle, Out 14 Weeks

Lakeland, Fla., March 17 (AP).—Hoot Evers, rookie center fielding sensation of the Detroit Tigers, suffered a broken left ankle and a fractured right thumb today as the world champions lost their seventh straight Grapefruit League game, 8 to 3, to Cleveland.

Evers was trying to beat a force play at second base in the seventh inning when his spikes caught as he started to slide. Shortstop Jack Conway's throw to first then struck the Tiger player's thumb as he raised his hand to protect his face.

He was carried from the field and rushed to Morrell Memorial Hospital, where doctors said Evers' ankle would be in a cast six to eight weeks and that he would be unable to play for 12 or 14 weeks.

Evers' average in eight exhibition games is .406 and he has hit safely at least once in every game.

Cleveland hopped Fred Hutchinson for five runs, three unearned, in the second frame, and coasted to victory.

Sam Snead's 274 Tops Demaret in Jax Open

Jacksonville, Fla., March 17 (AP).—Sam Snead, playing perhaps the steadiest golf of his career, slammed aside torrid competition today to win the $10,000 Jacksonville Open Golf Tournament by four strokes.

The long-driving pro from the Blue Ridge Mountains of Virginia had to fight soggy fairways and a galloping Jimmy Demaret all the way. He wound up the 72 holes with a 24-under-par 264, carding 67 during the morning round and 67 in the afternoon. Snead collected $2000.

Demaret of Houston, Tex., took second place with 268 and Pete Cooper of Gainesville, Fla., came in third with 271. Lawson Little of Monterey, Calif., was fourth with 274.

Demaret Steamed

Demaret, the Beau Brummell of the touring pros, played sensational golf during the third round. He racked up a nine under par 63 to set a new record for the 6272 yard Brentwood course.

At the half-way mark Snead led Henry Picard of Oklahoma City by six strokes and Demaret lagged three strokes further back. With that lead, The Slammer obviously realized that caution would pay off better than brilliance. He studied every shot and spent half of his time on the green flicking away pine needles so his putts wouldn't go astray.

The Virginia strong boy started the day by carding a birdie on the 340-yard par four first hole and another on the 351-yard par five second, where he missed an eagle by a turn of the ball on a 30-foot putt. From there on in he was close to the pin on most of his approaches, and deadly accurate on his putts.

Two AAU Fives Post 96-Point Record Totals

Denver, March 17 (U.P.).—The Phillips "66" Oilers of Bartlesville, Okla., and Denver's Ambrose Jellymakers set a high scoring record for the National AAU Basketball tournament today, downing their first round opponents with identical winning scores of 96 points.

Phillips overran Torrington, Wyo., 96-19 with their traditional sharpshooting plus a remarkable defense. Ambrose downed a spunky but outclassed Red Lodge, Mont., quintet 96-49.

A first round card loaded with 64 topflight cage squads from Virginia to the Hawaiian Islands sent the biggest AAU tourney in American basketball history on its way in two Denver gyms.

Other tournament results:

Sacramento (Calif.) Junior College, 75; Highlands University, Las Vegas, N. Mex., 19.
Casper (Wyo.) Western Oil Teelers, 63; Treasure Island, Calif., 42.

Welterweights Added to Ring Card Tuesday

Welterweights Artie Brown and Joe Davis have been added to the supporting card of tomorrow night's ring show at Turner's Arena, which will feature a 10-rounder between Bee Bee Washington and Jimmy Mandell. The bout is listed for five heats.

Other prelims are Ken Stribling vs. Manual Ross, middleweights, six rounds; Ben Davis vs. B. Z. Washington, welterweights, four rounds; B-29 Banks vs. Eddie Lyles, lightweights, four rounds, and George Espina vs. Billy Danker, welterweights, four rounds.

Much interest has been evinced in the Mandell-Washington bout, which is the third meeting between the pair. Bee Bee won the first, while the second, last month, ended in a draw.

The card starts at 8:45 p. m.

Calvert Extended In Parochial Play

Five teams advanced to the third round of the Parochial School Invitation tournament yesterday at St. John's with only Calvert, which was pressed to the last minute to defeat Our Lady of Lourdes, 25-24, extended.

In other games, Immaculate Conception defeated St. Martin, 21-10, St. Stephen won, 20-8, over Our Lady of Victory, Blessed Sacrament drubbed Holy Name, 30-16, and St. Dominic scored over St. Teresa, 24-18.

Bears Beaten By Bridgeport Pros, 55 to 49

They forgot to play "The Star Spangled Banner."

That was the alibi of the Washington Bears yesterday when they went down to a 55-49 defeat at the hands of the Bridgeport Newfields before a capacity crowd at Turner's Arena.

The visitors not only were speedier than the Bears at their best, but their agility and youth also helped tell the tale.

1000 Negroes Watch Hitless First Effort by Robinson

Daytona Beach, Fla., March 17 (U.P.).—For the first time in the history of southern baseball training, a Negro participated in an exhibition game today when Jackie Robinson played second base for Montreal as the International Leaguers lost to the Brooklyn Dodgers, 7 to 2.

More than 4000 fans turned out for the game, including 1000 Negroes, who overflowed the "Jim Crow" section making it necessary for about 200 of them to stand back of the right field foul line.

Robinson, former U. C. L. A. four-sport star, played six innings, failing to get a hit. He reached first base on a force play in the sixth inning, stole second and later scored. He was applauded on each appearance at the plate.

The Dodgers' four runs in the first inning came on Dixie Walker's triple behind three successive bases on balls. Eddie Chandler pitched the first seven innings for the Dodgers, yielding both runs in the sixth.

Fogel Duplicates Freak Golf Shot; Partners Stunned

The thought that freak golf shots are accidents was disproved at Prince Georges Country Club yesterday by Capt. Jim Fogel, playing in a threesome with First Lieut. R. L. Moseley and Capt. Harry LeHeuarex.

On the fourteenth hole, a 403-yard par four, Capt. Fogel hit his second shot into the woods to the right of the green, about 40 yards from the cup. Although he could barely see the green, he took out an eight iron and promptly smacked the ball into the cup for a birdie three.

Fogel was a trifle perturbed as his playing partners insisted his shot was all luck so he told them he had practiced similar shots diligently and could do it again. He took their dare and defied name-your-own odds by placing another ball in the same spot and—you guessed it—holing the practice shot right behind the original.

Newton Cox Returns To Maryland University

Maj. Newton Cox, who hung up a Southern Conference middleweight boxing championship while a member of the University of Maryland team from 1937 to 1940, is back on the campus for ROTC duty.

Prior to going overseas, Cox acted as athletic instructor at Camp Croft, S. C., taught physical training at Fort Benning, Ga., and played on the Benning baseball team.

Southern Tennis Title to Van Horn

Miami Beach, Fla., March 17 (AP).—Welby Van Horn today won the Southern Professional Tennis Championship in a gruelling five-set match with Frankie Kovacs of San Francisco, 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 7-9, 6-4.

The match lasted four and a half hours and prevented the scheduled doubles title match, which will be played Tuesday.

Pieces of Haight -- Home, Sweet and Hectic Home

Marietta Park, D. C.

Dear Boss,

I got home just in time for hotcakes and sausage, Boss, so you can tell the peanut butter sandwich factories they can ease up on production. It was a great homecoming. When I went up to the door, the newsboy hit me in the back of the head with the morning paper and the married woman I live with hit me in the face with last month's bills.

HAIGHT

If she had done like the boys at Bunker Hill, and waited until she saw the whites of my eyes, she wouldn't have fired yet, if you know what I mean. Of course, she expected me to lay my bankroll on the table, but instead, I presented her with two souvenir coins from the International Monetary Conference and she said, "Those and $12.85 will get our phone off the 'temporarily disconnected' list."

My darling daughter rushed up and asked, "What did you bring me, Pop?" I replied, "Nothing but myself." And she came back with, "Gypped again."

Our star boarder looked me over and remarked, "So you're back," and then under her breath she muttered, "Looks like I'll be getting the second-best pork chop again."

Mary, the maid, left the room and reappeared to play me a solo on our big-mouthed vacuum cleaner. The others laughed and I frowned for business reasons, but to tell the truth, she looked better to me than Gypsy Rose Lee plucking a guitar.

The little girl from down the street came in and I suspect she has had some more coaching from her mother for she said, "Oh, I see the moon isn't over Miami any more."

Well, Boss, they added another cup of water to the pancake batter and set a place for me at the table. I felt the radiator (it was warm, thank goodness) and sat down to a tasteful breakfast but some untasteful remarks like "You're the first man I ever saw who went to Florida and didn't get sunburned anywhere but on the end of the nose."

That was my fault, Boss, because I had forgot to tell them the story I invented on the way home about a sailfish biting me.

Finally, forced on the defensive, I used my No. 1 tactic of "I've got to go to the office."

Of course, I disliked the prospect of having to elbow my way through the big crowds waiting for me in Post Square, but I decided that was one of the things a celebrity has to endure. So I flexed the fingers of my autograph hand, filled my fountain pen and determined to limit my reply to the welcoming committee to 30 minutes.

Well, Boss, I guess the signals got crossed somewhere and the crowd was waiting for me at the end of the Memorial Bridge because everything was normal in front of The Post Building, just the usual passers-by. However, two young girls stood in front of one of the display windows, looking at another of those big ads about Shirley Povich or Mary Haworth, I figured.

But when I got closer, what to my wondering eyes did appear but a whole window layout devoted to Haight! A big picture of me sitting at a typewriter with a chicken in front of me, a relic of the time I won first prize in Jerry Strong's poultry contest.

I was about to tell the girls it was me, in person, when one said, "Isn't he a mess?" Without thinking I said, "You're right, Lady." And she swung around and snapped, "Who asked you—fat stuff?"

I stood there wondering how the photographer made my $25 suit look like a tailor-made job when three fellows came along. They looked at the window and one said, "That's Haight." Of course, I swelled up, Boss, but I was deflated a moment later when he continued, "Haight won the 1945 egg-laying contest—the hen was second."

As ever,
POUNDS HAIGHT.

P. S.—Boss, why not change the picture to the one of me with the prize hog?

Only NCAA, Invitation Tourneys Remain

Kansas City, N. Y. Hosts In Windups

New York, March 17 (AP).—With the exception of the March 26 playoff for the NCAA championships, the 1946 college basketball season, noted for its many upsets, bows out this week with the holding of the Eastern and Western NCAA eliminations and the final of the National Invitation Tourney at Madison Square Garden.

This is what is on tap:

Tomorrow night at Kansas City—the playoff between the Oklahoma Aggies, defending NCAA champions and champions of the Missouri Valley Conference, and Kansas, champions of the Big Six Conference, for the right to represent District Five in the Western NCAA eliminations Friday and Saturday.

Tomorrow night in New York—Rhode Island State vs Muhlenberg and Kentucky vs West Virginia in the semi-finals of the Garden National invitation tourney.

Wednesday in New York—championship final between the winners of tomorrow's semi-final games and a consolation between tomorrow's two losers.

Pairings Incomplete

Friday in Kansas City—First round of the Western NCAA eliminations; California vs Colorado University and Baylor vs the winner of the Oklahoma Aggies-Kansas game tomorrow.

Chandler's Collegiate Attire Startles Minor League Czar

By William Tucker
United Press Sports Writer

New York, March 17 (U.P.).—From pillar to post on the sports beat and watch out for the sharp turns:

The heavyweight fight that New York fans might have had last week will be staged in Detroit March 22 between Tami Mauriello and John Thomas. When Joe Baski had to withdraw from his engagement with Maurilleo, Promoter Mike Jacobs thought he could move Jack Kearns' new heavyweight, Joe Maxim, into the breach.

Mauriello

But Maxim dropped an unexpected decision to Thomas in the meanwhile ruling himself out, and Mauriello wanted no part of dangerous Joe Walcott. That left Thomas as the logical substitute but nobody did anything about it and Jacobs came up with a couple of lightweights.

In the trotting horse business, everybody seems to work a double shift. Most drivers are also trainers. Joe Neville, sleepy-eyed but wide awake promoter of the "Little Brown Jug" trotting classic in Delaware, Ohio, doubles as counsel for Orin Duncan and Leon Toole, drivers, who were charged in a trotter stimulation case last summer. . . .

Commissioner Happy Chandler, who has shaken baseball's aged rafters more than once, really rattled the timbers at the winter baseball meeting when he called upon impeccable Judge W. G. Bramham, czar of the minor leagues. Chandler wore a pullover sweater under his coat for the occasion. Bramham and his staff practically fainted. When Joe Engel, the old Washington pitcher, now operating at Chattanooga, heard of the incident he promptly bought the loudest sweater he could find and mailed it to Judge Bramham for Christmas. . . .

Billy Eck of Allentown, Pa., who won the middleweight championship of the European theater of operations and then grew into a heavyweight, vowed he would quit the ring after a recent opponent, Nat Hines, died of injuries received in the bout. But Eck is now shaking off the effects of the tragedy and may take up an offer to go to South Africa for a guarantee of $1000 a fight. There's gold above ground for American boxers in Johannesburg.

Everybody hopes that Kenneth Bailey, the fantastic Briton who has run something like 85,000 miles in nightly jaunts along the English south coast, will show well in the Boston Marathon next month. He kept up his lonely 100-mile trot throughout the war, with a few GIs keeping him company now and then. . . .

Chunky Chet Laabs, whose bat powered the St. Louis Browns into the 1944 World Series, was the second man ever to clear the center-field fence in Los Angeles' Gilmore Stadium when he clouted one in the recent major league All-Star game. Chet, we understand, is indignant because he has to pay 25 cents an hour for baby-sitters in his Detroit home. If he knows where we can find one at that price in New York, we will send a self-addressed, stamped envelope. . . .

The same experts who taught Cornel Wilde to shoot like the son of Robin Hood will demonstrate the bow and arrow technique to the press Tuesday on Macy's roof. And if you thought Cornel was Wilde . . .

All Records Smashed at Santa Anita

Arcadia, Calif., March 17 (AP).—Colossal is the word for the 55-day race meeting which ended at Santa Anita yesterday.

Attendance and wagering totals hit peaks believed unequalled by any meeting of similar length. Including a top crowd of 80,200 for the Santa Anita handicap, attendance totaled 1,826,291, an average of 33,217 daily. The part-mutuel take came to 140,686,541, a daily play of $2,537,936.

Two four-million days, California's first, brightened the cash windows. The handicap day take of $4,601,461 was tops. Closing day wagering crossed $4,473,041.

The meeting produced three world record performances among eight new track records. Snow Boots ran a mile and one sixteenth in 1:41 3/5 for one mark, while Don Conejo and Distaff both reeled off three furlongs in :32 3/5.

Horsewomen were in the limelight as Miss Ethel Mills' War Knight won the big handicap and Mrs. Elizabeth Arden Graham's Knockdown took the $10,000 Derby. But the leading money winner was Louis D. Mayer, whose steeds earned $174,285. Mrs. Graham was second, with $133,960.

On closing day, Fred Astaire's Triplicate romped off with a five-length victory in the $50,000 mile and a half San Juan Capistrano Handicap.

Stakes and purses totaled $2,464,250, making it by far the highest money meeting ever held. Fifteen stakes carried $675,000 in extra awards.

First Fiddle was rated the top handicap horse, despite his nose out by War Knight in the big 'cap, but Armstrong Stable's Holly Tree, winner of six of seven races, was the most consistent steed.

Armstrong Stable saddled most winners, 20, to Mayer's 19.

California thoroughbreds came into their own, meeting and exchanging wins with some of the East's best. California-bred horses won 182 races, for earnings of about $825,000.

Racing's Cleanup Man Hits Hard After Sleeper Period

By Davis J. Walsh
International News Service

Miami, March 16 (INS).—After months of amiable ineritia, the new head copper for the sport of kings, Spencer (FBI-Man) Drayton, is suddenly in action today in the Miami area and a Nation of horse track people are awaiting, rather uneasily, the next move.

Nobody can even faintly surmise the nature of this move, or where in the pattern of winter racing its swift impact might be felt. But all are agreed on one point.

The last move was drastic enough to impress everyone with the possibility that the new guy might new be ready to play a rattling good game of cops and robbers with the supposed bamboozlers of the stable area.

The last move, to be precise, placed a groom, James Newton, under arrest by Dade County authorities. He won't be tried by racing people. Instead, he'll be given a preliminary hearing in civil court next week on charges of violating a State law which forbids the stimulation of race horses, under pain of heavy penalties.

So little had happened, in fact that the stable area may have been lulled into a sense of fancied security. For its habitues even spoke ironically of the fact that a trainer, suspended for horse doping elsewhere, was said to be operating openly in Miami.

Housecleaning

But the Old Westbury case has changed all that to a point where trainers were hurriedly cleaning their closets today of all manner of soothing syrups, bunion softeners, staycomb, rough-on-rats, denture-stick—anything that might be held suspect of containing forbidden properties.

Up to 10 Years

One law provides a fine of $1000 to $5000. Another would cause the violator to do his roadwork henceforth on the end of a chain for a period ranging from 1 to 10 years. A conviction in this case—the first stimulation episode to come up under the Drayton aegis—would prove a powerful deterrent, horsemen cencede, to the needle and capsule boys all over the racing wheel.

In other words, the present situation is more than a test of guilt or innocence of a groom, accused of administering benzedrine to Old Westbury in the second race at Tropical Park last Saturday. It goes further than a question of culpability on the part of Trainer Clarence Reynolds, who stands suspended for the balance of the race meeting.

It's a real HAVANA CIGAR

The Fragrance That Pleases Everyone

There's a reason why a genuine imported Havana cigar merits the distinction of being overwhelmingly preferred by discriminating smokers in all parts of the world. First off, only on the island of Cuba can you find the right combination of soil and climate which produces the perfect tobaccos that go into a real Havana cigar. And only in Cuba do you get the know-how of skilled craftsmen with generations of cigar making experience handed down from father to son. That's why you get the ultimate in smoking pleasure when you light up an imported Havana cigar. And that's why men who know tobacco insist on buying genuine Havana cigars.

WE NEED FARM MACHINERY
LABOR WANTS TO PRODUCE IT!
LET'S GET GOING!

The following resolution was unanimously adopted March 6, 1946, at the convention of the National Farmers Union, meeting in Topeka, Kansas

WHEREAS: The International Harvester Company has refused to accept the recommendations of the Government Fact-Finding Panel to end the strike in their ten plants unless they are given a commitment by OPA that the Company will be allowed to raise substantially the price of farm machinery; and

WHEREAS: The United Farm Equipment and Metal Workers (CIO) has accepted the Panel Report as the basis for an immediate return to work and the resumption of production of farm machinery; and

WHEREAS: The policy of the Government properly refuses to trade wage increases for price increase, but does make due allowance for relief of hardships imposed by increases approved by the Wage Stabilization Board; and

WHEREAS: Other farm equipment companies are taking a position similar to that of International Harvester, thus threatening an even more acute shortage of farm machinery; and

WHEREAS: Farmers are in desperate need of farm machinery,

THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED:

That this Convention of the National Farmers Union does hereby urge the government to seize struck farm machinery plants, put into effect the Fact-Finding Panel's recommendations, and immediately resume production of farm machinery under government seizure until such time as the International Harvester Company is willing to resume uninterrupted private operation.

ARGENTINA INDICTED!

THE BLACK PERFIDY OF PERÓN'S FASCIST GANG EXPOSED IN ALL ITS TREACHERY

BY OUR OWN STATE DEPARTMENT!

Time Magazine says: "Argentina . . . stood accused of virtually every crime in the book against democracy. The stern indictment was written in language no nation ordinarily uses unless it is prepared to go to war."

President Truman says: New York Times, Feb. 16: "Mr. Truman said he had received the Blue Book from the State Department, had read it from cover to cover, and that it had been released for publication with his full approval."

Sumner Welles says: "It will arouse suspicion and hostility toward the United States throughout Latin America for a long time to come."

HERE is the ugly truth about Colonel Juan Perón and other leading public figures constituting the present Argentine dictatorship. It is not the fantastic report of a scandalmonger, nor the colored and exaggerated presentation of a sensation-seeking reporter or feature writer—but the cold, hard truth, word for word as released by our own State Department! It is the accusing finger of the United States of America pointed at a neighbor nation—not in wartime, but in peacetime—when all our thoughts are of a permanent world-wide peace!

THE DAGGER AT OUR BACK

This is the almost unbelievable story of a poisoned dagger held at our back while we were engaged in a desperate war with Germany and Japan!

On February 12, 1946, Dean Acheson, of the U. S. Department of State, handed copies of this spectacular BLUE BOOK ON ARGENTINA to diplomats of every South American country except Argentina.

The State Department charged, in what is probably the greatest single act of formal condemnation by one country against another, that two successive totalitarian Argentine governments had:

- conspired with Germany and fascist Spain to arm Argentina;
- conspired with Germany to spy on the war efforts of the U. S. A. and South American countries;
- conspired to give aid and comfort to the enemy at the cost of the lives of our men and shipping;
- conspired to disrupt American solidarity against the Axis;
- conspired to make other South American countries fascistic and anti-American.

In what is surely the most dramatic and forceful exposé of all history, our State Department proved how Argentina permitted the promulgation of Nazi propaganda, used Nazi money to promote fascist ideals and philosophy in South America, protected Nazi schools and organizations, aped German fascism, helped the Nazis carry on an attack against the Allies "as dangerous as a Nazi advance on the battlefield."

THE REIGN OF TERROR

The State Department's BLUE BOOK shows the operation of Argentine fascism, their methods of civic corruption, repression, and terror, control of labor, perversion of the educational system, control of the press, secret police and military government, misappropriation of Argentine monetary resources.

The State Department points with genuine alarm to the future dangers of German economic resurgence in Argentina—shows with the documentary evidence of letters, interviews with Nazi officials, secret agreements, captured documents never before released—how the Germans have constructed a complete duplicate of the economic structure for war which they had in Germany. Says the Blue Book: "They possess today in Argentina the economic organizations—industrial, commercial, agricultural—which they need to provide a base for the reconstitution of German aggressive power during the period when the homeland is still occupied."

HAVE WE WON THE WAR?

Can we believe that we have won the war while the very things we fought against in Germany and Japan are at present operating against us on our very doorstep? Here is the full story of Perón's complicity with the Axis powers.

The U. S. BLUE BOOK ON ARGENTINA is an exposé of the growth, perfection, and implementation of Argentine conspiracy. Some of it reads like an exciting spy thriller, but is all diabolically true—the intimate and complete details—the terrible things that happened in Argentina when other nations of this hemisphere were spending all their effort fighting a total war, their men dying in foreign lands, their treasure being depleted. Here are the facts, some of them long known but never before published!

WHERE DO WE STAND?

Now that this amazing document is published, where do we, the citizens of the U. S. A., stand on this question? The State Department said bluntly that "the present Argentine government is so seriously compromised in its relations with the enemy that trust and confidence cannot be reposed in that government." This document profoundly shocked and confused the South American countries last month. Argentina was stunned. What will happen now?

Sensational case history of the Nazi-Argentine plot against the freedom and peace of the world

YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

—that in 1942 Argentina decided to declare war against the U. S. A. in case we should compel her to take sides, and that she was storing up German-supplied arms;

—that Argentina engineered and was responsible for the pro-Axis Putsch in little Bolivia in December, 1943;

—that Colonel Juan Perón's ambition was, and is, to turn this whole hemisphere against the U. S. A.;

—that Argentina harbored a very large number of Axis spies and pulled every rotten trick in the book to keep them from getting into Allied hands, even when technically at war with Germany;

—that it was Germany who secretly initiated, financed, and controlled the peace plebiscite in 1942;

—that if there were any "good" Germans in Argentina, the Argentine government itself made them Nazis;

—that after the "break" in Argentine-German relations, the Argentines did nothing to touch German societies, schools, churches, hospitals, and welfare institutions;

—that it was Hitler himself—not Argentina—who finally decided that Argentina would be more a liability than an asset if she became his active ally;

—that Colonel Perón, in answering the Blue Book charges, made the infantile claim that it was our own Assistant Secretary of State, Spruille Braden, who ruled a vast spy ring, extorted money, got rich in Argentina.

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

Navy Will Begin Heavy Layoffs About April 1

KLUTTZ

NAVY: The reduction of its civilian employes will come more quickly and be far more drastic than officials had planned. The big lay-offs will start about April 1. It's now planned tentatively to have 200,000 employes off the rolls by June 30. Additional reductions may follow during the summer.

A threatened 30 per cent reduction in its budget will force the department to speed up dismissals. The President and the Budget Bureau have recommended to Congress a two-billion-dollar slash in the amount asked for by the Navy. Congress may restore some of the reduction.

The department had 540,000 full-time civilians in this country in February and it planned to go into a large-scale reduction from April 1 through September. By the end of this year it expected to be down to a peacetime staff of 320,000 civilians to support a 500,000-man Navy.

But then came the deep budget cut.

All previous plans have been discarded and new ones drawn up. The budget cut, if it goes through, would drop the civilian force in this country to around 240,000 by the year's end, or about 300,000 fewer employes than it had the end of January.

Some estimates are more; others are less, but all parties agree the reduction would be severe.

The Naval Gun Factory that had 13,325 employes on February 1 would be hard hit. A cut which would put it back to fewer employes than it had in prewar days—around 8000—already was scheduled by September 1 and now an even greater reduction is threatened before July 1.

Similar cuts will be made at the Alexandria torpedo plant and other Navy establishments in and near-by. Only the Naval Research Laboratory, Naval Ordnance Laboratory, the David Taylor Model Basin and other research projects will escape the sharp budget ax.

At headquarters here, the 25,000 officers and enlisted men on duty would be cut sharply. Major shifts would be made in the 17,000 civilian employes at headquarters and the net result would be considerably fewer. This is a breakdown of the proposed changes in the 1947 fiscal year that begins July 1:

Secretary's Office, a reduction of about 600, from 2402 to 1814 employes; in the Office of the Chief of Naval Operations the civilian staff would be increased from 252 to 750, mainly to replace military people; an increase from 357 to 590 would be made in Naval Communications; in the Bureau of Naval Personnel, an increase from 1402 to 1883.

Hydrographic office, an increase from 768 to 905; Naval Observatory, reduction from 174 to 150; Bureau of Ships, the largest reduction, from 3328 to 200; another cut in the Ordnance Bureau, from 1233 to 1092; Supplies and Accounts, a cut from 2614 to 2186; Medicine and Surgery, a reduction, 679 to 586; Yards and Docks, cut from 1143 to 704, and aeronautics, a reduction, 1512 to 910.

Overall, this would be a reduction of about 2300 civilian employes.

The Navy has roughly 40,000 civilians in and nearby. About 15,000 will be laid off if the budget cut is approved by Congress.

AGRICULTURE: It had two warehouse examining units. The House Appropriations Committee got wind of it and threatened to legislate a consolidation. Secretary Anderson made the action unnecessary by ordering them merged.

EXAMS: A competitive exam for war service typists and stenographers is due to be announced today. But it shouldn't scare the 20,000 in Government here. It's estimated there are 3000 vacancies on the Federal payroll here and thousands more outside Washington. This condition indicates that all you need is a passing mark to get certified for permanent status.

PROMOTIONS: But promotions to better jobs aren't given stenographers who can barely get by. The record shows that one of the best avenues to advancement in Government was along the stenographic path. Hundreds of Federal executives started that way. But an old hand in Government has called my attention to the fact that fewer stenos, in comparison, are promoted. Why?

Well, he makes the point that stenos formerly were much better trained than those who came in during the war and this penalizes those who are good as they can't be easily replaced. My friend—and he should know—believes we'll have a steno and typist shortage for many years because a good many girls who normally would have studied for this calling went into the factories during the war.

But the "get-by" steno of today who studies and prepares herself is certain of a bigger and better job. She can't miss.

UNIONS: Their role in the Federal Government will be discussed tomorrow evening at a Council of Personnel meeting in the Archives Auditorium. The union demands for exclusive bargaining rights in Federal agencies will be debated. The council has before it a request by a CIO union to bargain exclusively for workers in a Philadelphia naval establishment. The session should be interesting.

'Goodness' Is Best Word to Describe Quality Of Outstanding Mother From South Dakota

Mrs. Winifred G. McKee And Family in Capital With 22 State Mothers

What it takes to be an outstanding mother can be told in a lot of words, but the best and simplest one seems to be "goodness."

Other descriptive terms come to mind, of course, in writing about Mrs. Winifred G. McKee, 50, of South Dakota, who is in Washington with 22 State mothers of the Golden Rule Foundation.

But whether from South Dakota or your own neighborhood, it was motherhood Mrs. McKee unconsciously revealed last night as she talked quietly and modestly about why she was in Washington.

Mrs. McKee told of her work in the Red Cross, the Eastern Star and in her church back in Mitchell, S. Dak., but very little about running a six-room house and raising a family of three children and of cooking, too.

Need More Discipline

She thought modern children needed more discipline. Her twin sons, both naval lieutenants on terminal leave, sat on the edge of a bed in her room at a hotel and grinned when she said this. But neither commented.

Her husband, Herman A. McKee, who runs a lumberyard back in Mitchell and who is here with his wife and sons, said she was an excellent cook, and was obviously bursting with pride that his wife had been chosen the outstanding mother of South Dakota.

But of the quality, which could not exactly be defined, it was something that was part of being a good mother—raising a family, working part-time in a children's wear store while the boys were in high school, bringing up three children, among them Keith, the eldest, a B-25 pilot, who was killed in action over New Guinea last year.

Learned Last April

Mrs. McKee learned on Mothers' Day last April that she had been chosen State mother by the Golden Rule Foundation. The 22 State mothers are chosen by the foundation for their inspiration to family, community and country.

Although happy about being chosen, Mrs. McKee's first concern was her home and her church work. The juvenile delinquency problem in Mitchell, a town of 10,000 population, was of growing concern to the various agencies of which Mrs. McKee is a member.

But to Mrs. McKee, all this and raising a family, too, is part of the word "mother."

2 Unidentified Bodies Taken From Potomac

The bodies of two men—one of whom police believed had been dead less than 24 hours—were recovered from the Potomac River yesterday by Harbor police.

The body of one man was identified as that of George W. Powell, Negro, 1934 Fort Myer dr., Arlington, Va. Identification was made last night by Herman Powell of 1037 33d st. nw., brother of the dead man. George Powell has been missing since January 8.

An anonymous telephone call at 11 a. m. sent a police boat to the Georgetown Channel, between Memorial and the 14th St. Highway bridges, where a body was found floating on the river's surface.

A second call shortly after 2 p. m. sent Harbor Police to the northern end of Roosevelt Island, opposite Georgetown, where two boys had discovered Powell's body wedged in a sitting position in the island's rocky shore.

The first body, found about 100 yards down the channel from Memorial Bridge, appeared to be that of a white man about 65 years old, 5 feet, 6 inches tall, weight about 165 pounds, Coroner A. Magruder said.

Dr. MacDonald said he found no marks of violence.

Park Police reported they found a man's black hat and grayish brown topcoat on Memorial Bridge before dawn yesterday. The dead man had long white hair, wore a dark blue suit, a tan shirt, a blue polka-dot tie and black oxford shoes.

Police said the youths who found Powell's body were Clyde Follin, 15, of 1223 15th st. nw., and Billy McKerlie, 15, of 1451 N st. nw.

Harbor Police Sergt. Roy Cunningham and Privates William Cryer, Enoch Spence and Frank Carr took the bodies from the river.

District Seeks Swimming Pool Control

The District Commissioners are expected to discuss tomorrow the Recreation Department's efforts to gain control over all public swimming pools in Washington.

Specifically, recreation officials want to take over operation of six large outdoor pools now run by Government Services, Inc., under a special contract with the Interior Department.

With the GSI contract scheduled to expire on March 31, recreation authorities hope the Commissioners will agree to ask Interior Department officials for a delay in renewing the contract at a board meeting tomorrow. The delay would give recreation authorities time to discuss possible city control of the pools with the Secretary of the Interior.

The Recreation Board has not taken formal action calling for city control of the pools, but a majority of the board and superintendent of recreation have announced personal approval of this move.

Interior officials meanwhile indicated they would give careful consideration to any Commissioner's request on the matter. They expressed doubt, however, that the recreation board held authority to operate the swimming facilities.

Irving Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks, Interior Department, declared the law provides only for recreation department "programs" at the school.

The Individual Causes War, Cleric Says

The basic causes of war rest within the individual, Dr. Paul Scherer told 1000 persons yesterday at the Washington Cathedral.

"Why not blame the real causes of war?" the eminent New York clergyman asked, then added:

"Take war. We blamed Germany and Japan for the last war and we are about to blame Russia for the next war. Nonsense! War is a business—it is our business—the cause is what we are—no machine will save us. There must be a radical cure and only Christianity knows this."

Dr. Scherer is pastor of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church, New York City; professor of homiletics at Union Theological Seminary there, and was chosen for two years to give the Henry Ward Beecher lectures at Yale.

He will address the Washington Ministerial Union meeting today at 11 a. m. and 1:30 p. m., at First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw.

Peace Perils Draw Fire Of Spellman

By John F. Gerrity
Post Reporter

With a dramatic warning of impending world chaos, Francis Cardinal Spellman yesterday made an impassioned plea for relief to a war-scorched world.

He spoke of the misery of war—and war's effects. He said that one dreadful appeal arose from many lands—in many tongues—for food, clothes and shelter—for mercy and freedom.

He said that the life stream of the world had been poisoned by the "plague of militant atheism."

Cardinal Spellman called upon the youth of America, represented by 81 young men who a few moments before had received their medical degrees from Georgetown University Medical School, to fight "godless, lawless leaders, drunk with delusion, who would imperil the peace of the world."

Draws an Analogy

Drawing an analogy between the ills of the world, and the ills of men these young doctors would treat, the recently elevated Prince of the Church directed sharp criticism to those "lawless healers" who claim to cure the wounds of war by lawless tyrannies and remedies.

From knowledge gained when he served as military vicar of the Holy See for all American Forces abroad, and from observations made during his recent trip through Europe, Cardinal Spellman painted a pathetic picture of a war-torn continent today:

"From out of this broken body of the war world rise lamentations dreadful dirges resounding through the archways of the sky.

Must Be Faithful

He charged the young doctors to practice their profession as Americans must serve their fellow men: "No tale of treason can be more terrible than that of a doctor swayed by anything except the needs of him entrusted to his care."

Actually there were 82 degrees conferred yesterday afternoon in the crowded, picturesque Dahlgren Chapel at Georgetown—81 doctorates of medicine and one doctorate of law, to Cardinal Spellman.

The Very Rev. Lawrence C. Gorman, S. J., president of the university, traced Cardinal Spellman's career as a priest and statesman, and said in part:

"Francis Cardinal Spellman, in honoring you today Georgetown University honors herself. You have proved worthy of a place in the illustrious line of American bishops."

Among the graduates to receive the cardinal's blessing was his nephew, Robert Martin Spellman.

Following the graduation ceremonies, topranking Government, diplomatic, Army and Navy officials attended a two-hour reception for the cardinal in the Copley Lounge of the university.

Man Thrown From Horse

Samuel Sures, 49, of 8023 Eastern ave., Silver Spring, received severe injuries at Bradley Farms, Md., yesterday when he was thrown from a horse. Police said Sures, a watchmaker for a jewelry store at 3012 14th st. nw., received chest injuries, plus possible rib fractures and head cuts. He was taken to Emergency Hospital.

2 Die in Washington Hospitals After Automobile Accidents In Maryland and Virginia

Guard at Occoquan Is Fatally Injured By Hit-Run Driver

Two men died in Washington hospitals yesterday—victims in traffic accidents in nearby Maryland and Virginia.

George J. Daugherty, 48, a guard at the Occoquan District Workhouse, was injured fatally shortly after midnight Saturday when he was struck by a hit-run driver at Naylor rd. and Branch ave. Daugherty died en route to Casualty Hospital.

Second victim was Lieut. Allen A. Byron, 23, of the Eighty-second Airborne Division, Fort Bragg, N. C., who died at Walter Reed Hospital of a fractured skull suffered when his jeep overturned near Fredericksburg, Va., Thursday.

Daugherty, police said, was struck by a car driven by Ralph William Ferrel, 28, of Clinton, Md., and was being given first aid by members of the Bladensburg rescue squad ambulance crew when the ambulance was sideswiped by another car.

Maryland State Trooper Melvin L. Gent pursued the fleeing car and arrested a sailor, Kenneth Frederick Christiansen, 21, of Norfolk, Va. He was charged with reckless driving, turning off lights to avoid identification and driving without a license.

Gent said he would discuss filing of charges against Ferrel with State's Attorney Quinn Bowie today. Ferrel said he was blinded by lights of an approaching car and failed to see Daughterty soon enough to avoid striking him.

Another weekend traffic victim was Mrs. Elizabeth M. Hibbard, 30, of 266 Park ave., Takoma Park, Md. She suffered a fractured right leg and cuts early yesterday when struck by a hit-run driver as she crossed Georgia ave. nw. in the 4500 block. She was taken to the Washington Sanitarium and Hospital.

Expert Finds City Has Gone Far Toward Solving Traffic Ills

By Charles E. Davis, Jr.
Post Reporter

Washington has gone far in solving its traffic problems, but much can still be done.

This is the view of Col. Franklin M. Kreml, noted traffic authority, who was in Washington during the past week to attend meetings of President Truman's highway safety conference.

On Friday Colonel Kreml discussed the local situation briefly with Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner of the District.

General Young said he was "very much interested" in what Colonel Kreml had to say.

Safety Factor Stressed

"I outlined our problems in the District, said General Young. "We discussed principally the safety factor. Colonel Kreml said he would send me data on the subject."

Not long out of Army uniform, Colonel Kreml is director of the traffic institute at Northwestern University and also director of the traffic division of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

During the war, he was chief of the transportation section of Gen. Mark Clark's Fifth Army in Italy. After his return from overseas, he was made chief of the planning and logistics branch, highway division, in the office of the Army chief of transportation.

New Cars Pose Problem

Colonel Kreml believes the prospect of new automobile purchases in the months to come will pose a traffic problem of great magnitude.

"But as far as accidents are concerned," he says, "there is no mystery of how to bring them under control."

In his capacity as director of the traffic division of the Association of Police Chiefs, Colonel Kreml has studied traffic conditions in many cities throughout the country and suggested reforms.

In 30 American cities of varying size where recommendations made by Colonel Kreml's traffic division have been carried out there has been an average traffic fatality reduction of 40 per cent.

Traffic deaths were halved in Detroit when the experts went into the city, made a survey of the situation and instituted reforms.

How It Worked in Detroit

"Detroit's annual traffic toll was almost 400," says Colonel Kreml. "City officials called us in after 25 persons had been killed during a Christmas week. Our preliminary survey took 30 days. Then we wrote up a report, recommending what corrective measures should be taken.

"The reorganization job took 19 months and was completed in 1938. We completely reorganized the police traffic division. We interviewed 2600 policemen and the adaptable ones were assigned to training courses in all phases of traffic control.

"Today Detroit ranks behind only Milwaukee in the point of lowest traffic deaths per auto registrations. There were only 177 traffic deaths in Detroit during 1945.

"There were four deaths for every 10,000 automobiles registered in Detroit in 1945."

3 Times Greater Than War's Toll

(There were 96 traffic deaths in the District during 1945 and 6.6 deaths per 100,000 auto registrations. However the District figure was lower than the average of 13 large United States cities of 7.4 deaths per 100,000 auto registrations.—Editor's note.)

Colonel Kreml says that few persons realize that traffic takes a greater toll than war. During the war, three times as many persons were killed and injured in traffic accidents as were killed, wounded and reported missing by all branches of America's armed forces.

"The number of males of service age killed or incapacitated in traffic accidents in this country during the war," says Colonel Kreml, "equaled the strength of eight infantry divisions."

FRANKLIN M. KREML
Much Still Can Be Done

There's No Place Like Home For Capt. Abell, World Flier

China today, Egypt tomorrow and home in Washington in less than a week—Capt. Joseph D. Abell, Army Transport Command navigator, really gets around.

Joseph Abell

Captain Abell, the navigator of Gen. George C. Marshall's four-engine transport plane, has been touring the remote corners of the world since 1942.

He returned from China Friday, bringing General Marshall back from Shagnhai, after three months in the Chinese interior.

Since completing flight training at Kelly Field four years ago, Abell's life has reflected a history of the development of wartime air routes and of taking important persons to important places.

He Ferried Bombers

In the early days of the war, with the Japanese cutting America's supply line to Australia, he aided in opening the southwest Pacific air route by ferrying bombers to battered American forces in New Guinea and northern Australia.

When the Japanese threatened Midway Island he flew a shuttle service from Hawaii to Midway, evacuating American planes and personnel. For this he was awarded an Air Medal.

In 1943, while flying ferrying missions from the East Coast, he established a speed record—from West Palm Beach, Fla., to Karachi, India—of 66 hours and 30 minutes. For flying night and day over the South American jungles, the south Atlantic waters and the desert lands of Central Africa, he received a cluster to his Air Medal.

A year later, when the ATC opened its own overseas passenger runs, Capt. Abell was one of the first to fly the route from Wilmington, Del., through the Azores, across North Africa to India.

In mid-1944, when Paris was freed and the ATC opened a route from Presque Isle, Maine, to the French capital, he was named chief navigator for the run. And after VE-Day he flew to Stockholm, Sweden, from the same base.

Assigned last year to the Special Missions Unit of ATC at National Airport, Capt. Abell has since:

Served as crewman for General Henry H. Arnold, former chief Army Air Forces on flights to Mexico and the West Coast.

Helped fly a C-54, a gift from President Truman to General de Gaulle, to Paris.

Welcomed by Chinese

Captain Abell said that he covered about 3200 miles of China with General Marshall.

"Wherever we went the Chinese gave us the glad hand of welcome," he said. "We stayed at a Catholic mission at Tiayuna, deep in the heart of China. The missionaries there treated us as well as I've ever been treated outside the States."

Captain Abell, a former student at Maryland University, lives here at 1401 A st. ne. He is now visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ethelbert Abell, at their home in Leonardtown, Md.

"I don't know how long it will be before we leave again," he said, "but in the meantime I'm staying on the ground—and in one place."

Rep. Monroney Asks Congress For Home Rule

Representative Mike Monroney (D., Okla.) yesterday called on Congress to cease serving "as a city council for the city of Washington" and to grant home-rule to the District.

Monroney, a member of the joint committee on reorganization of Congress—which recently became the first legislative body to approve self-government—urged that Congress allow "the people of the District to decide the type of city council they want."

Can Ease Load

Speaking from Radio Station WOL on the problems of congressional reorganization, Monroney said Congress can get rid of a "work load" by granting home rule.

"About one day out of every two weeks in Congress is devoted to District problems," he said. "In addition, two committees, composed of 36 members, must devote a good part of their time to purely municipal problems.

"Further, two sub-committees on appropriations must do considerable work in formulating and passing on fiscal matters concerned only with District operations."

Defends Legality

Monroney defended the legality of the joint committee's proposal for home-rule. "The Congress should and could retain the right to protect the national interest, while at the same time delegating the administrative duties of the District to a municipal government," he said.

He added that while the Constitution does not stop Congress from granting "purely ordnance making power to an elected city council."

That Congress is now involved in "matters of ordnance" was recently made clear, he said, when the House took "one entire afternoon on a District bill regulating the size of rockfish which might be sold in the District."

Class Honors Laws On 13th Birthday As Bible Teacher

The A. B. Pugh Men's Bible Class yesterday honored District Court Justice Bolitha J. Laws on his thirteenth anniversary as teacher.

Dr. John W. Rustin, pastor of Mount Vernon Church, praised Justice Laws as "a great teacher and an outstanding citizen in Washington." He recalled that the jurist wa samong the first recipients of the War Federation of Churches' annual plaque for Christian citizenship.

"The class has been a tremendous influence in my life," said Justice Laws, as he arose to teach the leson, "and I have gotten far more out of the clas than I have been able to give to it."

Louise George Finds Planning Meals In Advance Shortens Kitchen Hours

"Wait until you hear Dick's special food request." That was the remark of Mrs. Alexander R. George, who is anxiously waiting the homecoming of her 22-year-old son Dick. He's been serving in the Navy in the Pacific for more than two years.

"Chocolate cake, plenty of cold roast chicken and lots of cold, cold milk," is the longing of this blue jacket. And you can bet this young veteran will find exactly that food on tap when he arrives at his Alexandria, Va., home.

Louise and her husband, who is a feature writer for the Associated Press, have revised their way of living. Formerly there were five in the family, now there are only two. But the "cooking for two" hasn't been a difficult adjustment. Louise is an expert menu planner. For a number of years she wrote a syndicated food column. Perhaps that's one reason why she takes meal preparation with great ease.

Minimum of Marketing

One or two "cook days" a week easily line up her meal preparations. "I go meat shopping when supplies are available," she says. Constant scouting handles this phase of marketing. With the exception of bread and salad ingredients, weekly shopping is sufficient for staples. The refrigerator takes good care of excess perishables. Cupboard space is limited, so purchases are not large. She buys only five or six potatoes at a time and the same number of apples.

"Packaged cheeses, tomato paste or canned tomatoes, when available, allow for one or more meatless dinners," says this homemaker. She always keeps on hand an abundance of eggs, milk and citrus fruits, so necessary to carry on a health program. Cheese, hard-cooked eggs, omelets, or eggs and bacon make up dinner at times.

"I tie in with green salad and spinach, lettuce, thinly sliced carrots or celery for the "crunch," onions, and always a celery seed dressing, Mrs. George told me. This type of dressing is a "George must." She keeps this dressing on hand always to pep up vegetable, chicken, fish, meat or fruit salads.

"We eat graham muffins, cornbread or toasted bread, rolls or biscuits," Mrs. George declared. "Bread leftovers often pile up in small families, so I use toasted bread often. With a lemon sponge or chocolate puddings—a few nuts added for protein supply—you have an ample meal. Salted peanuts may be used as well as pecans or walnuts—a tablespoonful is ample for two."

Saves Time, Effort

Next I learned how Louise George conserves time and effort in meal preparation. This is her story:

"Guests are no more entitled to fancy meals than the Georges. Our guests always seem pleased when invited to a family meal expanded to serve four or five instead of the customary twosome.

"One of our pet meals is a dish I make from a less expensive cut of beef—Sirloin Tip en Casserole. This is the menu:

DINNER MENU

Sirloin Tip en Casserole
Browned New Potatoes Carrots
Sliced Head Lettuce
Relish Dressing
Bread (optional)
Baked Apples with Cream
Milk Tea Coffee

The following Louise George recipe should be very helpful to those homemakers who like to use a roast in different ways:

SIRLOIN TIP PROCEDURE

Buy about 4 pounds sirloin tip—all meat, little waste, fine flavor. Have butcher cut meat in half crossway. Freeze one piece for future meals. Brown one half in small amount (2 tablespoons) margarine, cooking oil or solid fat. Suet cut from beef may be used. Use small stew pan with tight cover. Add ½ cup finely chopped celery leaves and coarse part of celery, 2 tablespoons sliced green pepper, 3 tablespoons minced onion, two-thirds teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons catsup or chili sauce. Cover tightly. Simmer 4 hours or until very tender. Add ¼ cup boiling water after cooking 1 hour. Remove meat, cool and chill. Chill stock and fat in cooking pan. Skim off fat from top of stock. Mix with flour and cold water (5 tablespoons flour and two-thirds cup water). Add to stock in pan and cook until a thick sauce forms, stirring constantly. Add salt and pepper if needed. Add meat cut into 2 inch cubes or slices. Pour into margarined baking dish. (I use aluminum as it can be chilled in refrigerator until meal time.) Budget willing, I add 5 medium sized fresh mushrooms cut into two-thirds inch pieces. Bake 25 minutes or until top browns.

Gravy Fine Topper

"Scrape carrots lightly—never peel them—cook potatoes in jackets, then cool and peel. Place in shallow baking pan with 2 tablespoons fat (bacon is fine). Bake or cook under broiler until browned. Arrange on heated platter. Thicken stock as for gravy, pour a little over meat, but NOT on vegetables. Pass remaining gravy. The gravy makes a fine topper for hot biscuits or corn bread, so say my guests.

Noodles, rice or macaroni can be used under meat and served en casserole. Accompany with buttred cabbage, broccoli or spinach. Line up with lettuce salad and Russian dressing or carrot strips and crisp cauliflowerets. Pass Russian dressing for dunking. Serve a fresh fruit dessert.

The Other Half

"The remainder of the sirloin tip can be sliced thin and broiled for savoury steak or oven roasted. Rump can take the place of sirloin tips, but the flavor is not so good, in our opinion.

"I usually do all meat and vegetable preparation on one "cook day," while working in kitchen area. Next day I ovenize or do all preparation in morning. Advance preparation is my greatest saving.

"To save money and fat I combine butter and margarine. I add a generous pinch of salt and a small one of sugar. I let mixture blend on plate, add a little margarine coloring and give a few presses with a fork as I am working nearby. When blended, scrape onto waxed paper, fold up and tuck in utility tray under ice trays. Proportions used: ½ pound butter and ½ pound margarine, ¼ teaspoon salt and ⅛ teaspoon sugar.

Barbara Mark To Be Married Here Today

Shades of Pea Soup Decorate a Wall; R. T. Pell's Arrival Initiates Party Round

By Eva Hinton

SPRING and the urge to housecleaning can turn any well-run home topsy-turvy but it was a mania for decorating and painting that put a dignified dinner party out of kilter the other evening.

Soup had been served when suddenly one of the ladies screamed down the table to her husband, "Darling, isn't this the most BEAUTIFUL soup? It would be perfect on our drawing room walls!

I heard later that the painter copied the soup faithfully (it was a concoction of cream and peas) and put it on the drawing room walls where it looked TERRIBLE!

SETTING off a series of friendly gatherings in Washington is the recent arrival from Paris of Robert T. Pell. Mr. Pell has lived in the Capital off and on all his life and was on duty at the State Department before he went to Europe on General Eisenhower's political advisory staff.

Since the end of the war Mr. Pell has been director of the Paris Post, which ended a promising career when its soldier readers returned to the U. S. A.

Attractive Mrs. Pell has gone to Nassau to visit her mother and the Pell children and to try to regain 25 pounds she lost in less than a year's battle with difficult living conditions in France.

The other afternoon Mrs. Joseph P. Cotton asked friends in at cocktail time in honor of Mr. Pell. Baroness de Gruben was there, looking more beautiful than ever with the sun-tan acquired on her recent visit to the Art Landas in Palm Beach. The vivacious hostess, also sporting a Palm Beach tan, wore a becoming pink tailleur as she received some of her Georgetown neighbors, among them Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Cumming, jr., the John Walkers, and Countess de Martino.

During his visit Mr. Pell is the guest of his cousin, Lieut. Claiborne Pell, and Mrs. Pell in Georgetown.

BEFORE taking off for a vacation at Hot Springs with her young daughter, Sharon, handsome Mrs. Carrere Barbour gathered a few friends for cocktails in honor of her cousin, Comdr. Robert M. Carrere. Commander Carrere, who has served in both world wars, is an architect between wars and is a nephew of the famous architect, John Carrere.

Mrs. Dean Acheson, wife of the Undersecretary of State, chatted with Col. and Mrs. Percy Black. Pretty Mrs. Millard Tydings, escorted by the Senator, was discussing plans for Red Cross nurses' aide work with the hostess.

Mrs. Barbour's sister, dark-eyed Mrs. Marshall Dierssen, was there with her husband and I also saw the Curtis Munsons, the Gardiner Platts, and the Belgian Military Attache, Count de Borchgrave.

WHEN the Swedish Naval Attache, Commodore Olof Angelin, and charming Mrs. Angelin entertained at cocktails the other afternoon it was farewell to their house on Foxhall rd. but not farewell to Washington. The good news for their many friends is that the Commodore has been asked by his government to remain another year in his present post.

Once Adoring Wife, Bunking With Her Parents Until Army Husband Can Find a House, Grows Curt With Impatience, Throws Him Into Panic

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been married for eight years—to the "perfect wife," in my opinion. She has loved and honored me and I, in turn, have loved, honored and obeyed her. Our marriage, idyllic to start, was made even more so by the addition of two charming children.

We lived comfortably and happily together until I entered the Army in 1942. And while we suffered the pangs of separation for the next two years, we were fortunately able to maintain our own household during most of 1944 and 1945, so that even the disruptive influences of war did not jeopardize our union.

Last October we were evicted from our house, and even that did not discourage us or cause any discord. To solve the impasse I took a three months' assignment overseas, while my wife and the children went to Arizona to visit her parents. But now I am facing a marriage crisis so acute that I must lose no time getting expert advice; and because I respect your judgment I am turning to you.

Her Last Letter
A Serious Blow

SINCE I returned here in mid-January, I have been unable to find a place for us to live; and while my wife understands that she and the children are to rejoin me as soon as I can provide an unfurnished apartment or house, she is growing unreasonably impatient at the delay.

She says the situation in Arizona has become unbearable, not that family relationships are in any way strained, but because her parents' house—one bedroom, living room, kitchen and bath,—is far too small for three adults and two children. In vain have I explained that the housing situation here is nearly hopeless; and that I have tried, unsuccessfully, all conceivable methods to find a place for us.

I told her the outcome of my week-long advertising in the "Wanted to Rent" section of two leading newspapers. I had three responses: one from a woman who thought I was offering an apartment; one from a rival newspaper asking what results I was getting; and the third a follow-up query from the rival paper.

Despite my apologies and explanations, my wife's letters are increasingly cold and yesterday—the final blow—she told me not to write her again until I am able to say I have located a place. You have given invaluable aid and comfort in thousands of cases. What do you suggest here? R. S.

Pair Have Been ### Apart Too Long

DEAR R. S.: A house divided must fall, 'tis said. You and your wife have been apart for too long, in circumstances on her part which make her feel tricked into a trap and abandoned by you—especially since your return from overseas.

Of course her feelings don't make sense from where you stand; but if you were in her shoes, you would feel the same. Whereas if she were at your side today, sharing the house-hunt, the misunderstanding would not exist. She would see your predicament through your eyes and appreciate the pathos of your equally desperate, frustrated panic.

Now for advice: If you, your wife and her parents will all pull together in one grand final heave-ho, the situation can be saved, I'm sure. As an emergency measure, your wife should be relieved of the children's care for a month at least, so that she can rush here footloose, as fast as transportation can bring her, to repair the rift in married companionship on the one hand, and to personally comb the town and surrounding countryside with her own search parties on the other hand, for a place to call home.

Man Is AWOL
From Marriage

AT PRESENT she is leading a galley slave existence, chained and galled, cramped and joyless. You are free as an eagle compared to her; and I think this flight into the outside world sans nursery ties, to give a month to house hunting on a Scotland Yard scale—that you haven't the time for,—would be elixir to her veins, giving her the strength of 10 to pursue the quest to triumphant conclusion.

So get her here by any means, at any price. Vote her parents, yours, anybody reliable, a big bonus if necessary to pinch-hit with the children. And no sentimental doldrums on anybody's part about how they may react to the jolt of separation from mother. No fainting before obstacles of any sort. You need your wife at hand to captain the marriage if you are to lift it off the reef.

Your big mistake was in grabbing an overseas assignment to "solve the impasse" last October. That was psychological desertion; and psychologically, you've been AWOL from the ranks of the married ever since. You are giving too much attention to scare stories of scarcity and not enough to constructive action. M. H.

Children Need Space To Romp In

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

With a housewife's greatest self-consciousness about the picture aspects of her home, so that each room looks like the illustrations in a magazine, she has to give more thought to the place in which her child can live and carry on his own daily activities.

There should be a room or corner of a room devoted to the growing child so he can play, romp, climb and yell without driving his mother to fury. He should not be hedged about with countless inhibitions designed to keep the house in perfect order.

Mrs. N. S. has some pointed remarks to make about this subject. "The home, I believe, is too often kept on display for visitors," she writes, "and mothers go about in a constant state of anxiety lest the chance visitor catch the rooms looking as if a baby lived in them.

Play Together

"My children and I often hike together or go to a movie or sing, read and play games. Sometimes we spend the day shopping and in order to do this have to pitch in with the chores, simplify meals and cut the housework to the minimum.

"Hot summer days we spend by the creek (this is evidently a farm or suburban home), and we do our canning in the cool of the evening. Dishes dry themselves, beds are healthful if aired all day and we make them up when we go to bed at night."

This is a nice attitude, but one would have to be happy in it. All mothers would not be. No home where there are children should be expected to be in perfect order.

Mme. Wei, wife of the Chinese Ambassador, entertained yesterday for some of her friends at "Twin Oaks," the Chinese Embassy, to say goodby before she leaves Wednesday for a visit of several months in China.

The party was primarily for Mme. Wei's fellow members of Kappa Beta Pi, women's legal fraternity, and to exhibit some paintings done in China by Miss Virginia Fitzgerald of New York. The artist wore a Chinese mandarin coat at yesterday's affair.

Mme. Wei, wearing a gray satin tunic with sprigs of rose and blue flowers, received her friends in groups.

Guests included Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, accompanied by Miss Martha Lee Reams of Toledo, Ohio; Mrs. A. C. Wedemeyer, wife of General Wedemeyer; Mrs. Helen Lombard, Mrs. Walter R. Amesbury, jr., Miss Alice Hager, Miss Faith Brewer and Mrs. Nelson Johnson, wife of the former Minster to China.

Guests from the legal profession included Mrs. Edwin Avery, Judge Ellen Raedy, Miss Grace Stiles, Miss Helena Doocey Reed, Mrs. Selma Borchardt and Miss Carolyn Just.

Birthday Celebrated

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Payson celebrated Mrs. Payson's birthday and that of St. Patrick yesterday with a bridge-breakfast at their Schuyler Arms apartment.

Joining the Paysons were Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Wells, Miss Eleanor Wells, Mr. and Mrs. J. Lee Murphy, Mrs. Jessica Seurth, Capt. and Mrs. John F. Jackson, Comdr. and Mrs. Harold Payson, jr., Mr. and Mrs. George H. Copeland, jr., Mrs. Marthena Harrison Williams, Mrs. Frederick Haberman 2d, Miss Jane Morgan, Mrs. Frederick Barker, Miss Genevieve Reynolds, Walter Squire, Frank Severence, Capt. Stanley Young, Malcolm Burke and Maurice Walker.

Issue Invitations

Naval and Air Attaches and the Chiefs of Commissions of the Latin American Countries, have issued invitations to a cocktail party tomorrow at 6 p. m. at the Mayflower in honor of the former and present officers of the Pan American division.

Cocktail Hostess

Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt will entertain at a cocktail party Wednesday at the Sulgrave Club.

World Won't Outlaw A-Bomb, Pastor Says

Dr. John W. Rustin yesterday termed "utterly ridiculous" any attempts to outlaw the atomic bomb, as he urged science and religion to work together to avert world destruction.

"You will never outlaw the atomic bomb," he declared at Mount Vernon Place Methodist Church, 9th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw., and added:

"It makes no difference what Congress does; it makes no difference what Britain does; it makes no difference what Russia does; it makes no difference what Churchill says—there will be complete, utter destruction for civilization if war comes.

"Won't Work in War"

The minister contended it is easy to say in peacetime that the atomic bomb can be outlawed, "but it will not work in time of war." He said the only alternative to destruction is mankind's repentance.

Discussing the relation between science and religion, Dr. Rustin said there must be Christian men who understand scientific truths, and scientists who believe in God's power.

"Science is saying today that we need moral and spiritual controls or we shall all perish," declared the pastor.

Rev. F. X. Talbot Preaches On Ten Commandments

Preaching yesterday at the Catholic Church of the Immaculate Conception, 8th and N sts. nw., the Rev. Francis X. Talbot, S. J., former editor of America, declared, in part:

"We cannot alter the Ten Commandments of God to fit our lawless desires or our selfish ambitions. These Ten Commandments are eternal and unchangeable. If there is a conflict between us and them, we must alter ourselves to fit them. We cannot bend them to our own aims without breaking them. But we can bend ourselves to them and gain from them strength and peace."

"Would that it could be said that no Catholic ever violates any one of the Ten Commandments. But it can be said, and that vehemently, that no Catholic ever should violate any one of the Ten Commandments, no matter what the temptation to do so might be.

"The observance of these Ten Commandments is the link that joins us, in peace and love, with God. But for us, as Catholics, the observance of the Ten Commandments is but the beginning of our Catholic life. It is not enough for us to be sinless. It is required for us to be virtuous, to go forth beyond the Commandments to the practice of those higher virtues of faith and hope and charity, to a universal love of our fellow men and the supernatural love of God."

Mass Broadcast

The mass was broadcast directly from the church over WINX. The Rev. Joseph E. Gedra, pastor, was celebrant. The Rev. Eugene Gallagher, S. J., of Georgetown University, explained the mass.

Several widely known clergymen will be in the Capital for Lenten services this week.

Dr. Paul Scherer, associate professor of homiletics at Union Theological Seminary, New York City, and pastor of Holy Trinity Lutheran Church there, will address the Washington Ministerial Union today at 11 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. at First Baptist Church, 16th and O sts. nw. He preached yesterday at the Washington Cathedral.

Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, pastor of Christ Methodist Church, New York City, and minister of the National Radio Pulpit, will speak today through Wednesday at noon at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G st. nw.; tomorrow at 8 p. m. at YMCA-sponsored services at First Congregational Church, 10th and G sts. nw., and this afternoon at Maryland University.

Anthropologist to Speak

Dr. Ruth Benedict, prominent anthropologist and coauthor of "Races of Mankind," will discuss "Family Life in Other Nations" at 8:15 p. m., Friday at 1212 18th st. nw. This is the first of a series of public lecture-discussion groups on "Your Child and His World" sponsored by the Women's Auxiliary of the United Federal Workers of America.

H.L. Beall Dies; Kin Owned Georgetown

Funeral services for Horace L. Beall, 81, direct descendent of the original owner of Georgetown, will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow at his home, 6808 Exfair rd., Bethesda, Md.

Mr. Beall, who was a patent attorney in Washington for more than 60 years, died Saturday at Suburban Hospital following a brief illness.

Mr. Beall's forbear, Col. Ninian Beall, won the original grant to land that is now Georgetown.

Mr. Beall was one of the first operators of the Mergenthaler linotype machine and demonstrated its use before President Arthur in the old Chamberlin's Hotel, 15th and I sts. nw. in 1885. In the same year in Baltimore, he set the first type on the machine for a newspaper.

Mr. Beall was born in Washington and educated in public schools here. He worked as a court reporter before going into patent law practice in 1885.

He was a member of the Board of Trade, Sons of the American Revolution and the Cathedral Heights Citizens Association. He attended St. Alban's Episcopal Church. He was one of the founders of the Columbia Athletic Club and a member of the old Columbia Boat Club.

Survivors include his wife, Mrs. Agnes W. Thomas Beall; a son, Thomas Emmert Beall; a granddaughter, Miss Anne E. Beall, and three grandsons.

Eight Settle for $2286 on OPA Charges

Eight local businessmen made voluntary settlements totaling $2286.80 following OPA charges of price ceiling violations, price officials announced yesterday.

Those fined included the operators of three restaurants, three laundries, a delicatessen and a shoe repair shop.

Joseph H. Moss, proprietor of the Four Hundred, at 1425 F st. nw., made the biggest single settlement. This restaurant was charged with selling 33 items of food and drink at total overcharges of $626.93. Moss paid one and one half times the total, or $940.35 in settlement.

Restaurateur Pays $918

George Makrides, of 1723 I st. nw., paid $918.45 following price panel hearings in which his restaurant was charged with dropping all 55-cent dinners in violation of restaurant regulations, as well as over-charging a total of $306.15 on other items.

After proving that over-charges made by Mickey's at 1115 17th st. nw., were not intentional, John Cheffas, the proprietor, was permitted to settle for the exact amount of overcharges on 1416 items, as provided in OPA regulations. This sum amounted to $228.

A minimum penalty of $50 was paid by Alfred Wilheimer, proprietor of Shepard Delicatessen, at 3933 14th st. nw., on charges of selling bacon at 4 cents above ceiling price.

Joseph Cifalo, proprietor of a shoe repair shop at 1903 1st st. nw., voluntarily paid $50 on a $1.20 overcharge. Moy Lin, who operates the Canton Hand Laundry at 1602 Rhode Island ave. ne. also settled for $50 for charging $13.33 too much on 347 items.

Two other Chinese laundrymen paid $25 each. They were Yew Eng, who runs Eng's Hand Laundry, 1824 1st st. nw., for overcharges totaling $6.83 on 295 items, and Chin Poy, whose Chin Point Laundry at 3110 Georgia ave. nw., was accused of overcharging a total of $2.15 on 101 items.

Three of the laundries, OPA said, were referred to price control boards as a result of a recent laundry survey.

Inevitable Cycle

By Roger W. Babson

Both Economic and Social

With an "accident" for President, "old chums" for Cabinet officers and a Congress looking only for votes, our political situation appears very bad. My Democratic friends say that conditions really are no worse than in the past. They claim our pessimism is due to the radio, with its "news" and commentators, (which the newspapers have been forced to imitate) which serves as a great magnifying glass to make these evils look bigger than they really are.

Many people believe that we are in an unfortunate era of an inevitable social and economic cycle. They believe that to attempt to stop it is like trying to "brush back the ocean with a broom." They believe it much better to wait until the tide naturally turns back to conservatism as it sometime surely will. I cannot agree with this do-nothing philosophy.

I believe we all should fearlessly fight for what is right however much we may temporarily suffer. I believe that this country and the entire world could be saved from much grief by one simple thing. This would be for the conservative Democrats of the South and the conservative Republicans of the North to combine into one party.

It is true that our political leadership is very bad. This is why a few labor leaders are able to bully courts, Congress and the people into doing what is unjust and unsound. But the majority of the American voters are still wise and unselfish. They lack only the ability to express themselves due to the queer mix-up of both parties. If voters were able to forget the labels "Republican" and "Democrat" and could choose between "New Deal" and "Anti-New Deal" there is no doubt as to what would happen. Once more we would have a safe representative government as the founders of our country planned.

In the meantime, it may be well to be forearmed and to diversify our forms of security. I believe in life insurance, for instance, but a life insurance policy will not give me food, clothing and shelter when none of these things are available. Hence, every large city family, who can afford it, should have a small productive place somewhere outside the city. Moreover, until most city families have such refuges, strikes will continue to grow more severe. They cannot be prevented by law. Only when families become independent of city conveniences, will the labor unions come to their senses.

I am especially interested in the possibilities of home refrigeration of food supplies. If we could be sure that our electric power would never be turned off, I would recommend that every family buy a home-freezer and join a community cooperative freezing association. On the other hand, the more we depend on these home-freezers, the more we are subject to the control of labor unions and politicians. Hence, those of us who use home-freezers should have them supplemented by a good supply of canned foods.

I wish that every family could have a refuge in Florida, California, Arizona or some other Southern State. This would immediately eliminate the fuel hazard from which Northern cities throughout the world are suffering today. Moreover, with a flowing well or irrigation, food can be raised in the Southern States every month of the year. In fact, the food, clothing and shelter problem is largely solved by having a place in a warm section of the country.

I am not fearful of immediate trouble, but we should "insure" our investments against the possibility that they may, for a time, be of no use in supplying us with food, clothing and shelter. We buy fire insurance when we do not expect a fire! Certainly, the chances of a revolution within this country some time are equal to the chances that your individual house will burn down. Hence, why not equally insure for both hazards? This does not mean that one should now sell stocks. Money in good common stocks is probably safer than money in the bank. It merely means "hope for the best, but prepare for the worst."

Are You and Yours Enrolled?

Blue Cross is a low-cost, nonprofit, voluntary plan for taking care of doctor and hospital expense. For remarkably small monthly payments . . . a few cents a day . . . the hospital and doctor are paid for services to the entire family.

Most Blue Cross subscribers never see a doctor or a hospital bill. You simply present your card at the hospital . . . the bills are then sent direct to Blue Cross for payment.

Already, 21,000,000 Americans . . . thousands of them in this state . . . enjoy Blue Cross . . . freedom from worry over doctor and hospital expense when illness or accidents occur. Thousands are subscribing daily.

Endorsed by Doctors and Hospitals

Blue Cross is the only plan endorsed by the leading doctors and hospitals . . . from coast-to-coast . . . and the American Hospital Association. It is made possible through the co-operation of hospitals and doctors, the leaders of your community and leading employers. Once you are a subscriber, you can continue contract for yourself and your family as long as you live . . . wherever you live, whether you are employed or not.

Because the hospitals and doctors offer the services, they can be most liberal.

Avoid Dangerous Delay

Most illnesses arise too suddenly to allow adequate planning for hospital expense. As a result, nine out of ten people have trouble getting together enough money to pay their hospital bills. You can avoid troublesome financial questions and great financial inconvenience if you subscribe to Blue Cross.

Through Blue Cross a doctor or a hospital bill is paid in the U. S. every 18 seconds!

Blum Plans Meetings With Truman, Byrnes

By the Associated Press

State Department officials said today that appointments are being arranged for French Ambassador Extraordinary Leon Blum to confer with President Truman and Secretary of State Byrnes.

He came here for economic negotiations centering on a loan to France, which probably will start toward the end of the week, shortly after the expected arrival from Paris of Jean Monnet, economic adviser to Blum.

Ban on Jews Lifted

Jerusalem, March 17 (AP).—Four days of tension in northern Palestine subsided today when 22 officials rescinded a ban on the establishment of a new Jewish settlement at Biryah where more than 1000 Jewish settlers had gathered since Thursday despite the no-settlement rule.

World Bank Votes Today On Directors

Savannah, Ga., March 17 (AP).—One of the most unusual elections in history—the results of which can be almost certainly forecast—will be held here tomorrow as a windup gesture of the inaugural meeting of the governors of the World Bank and Monetary Fund.

An initial posting of nominations and a canvass of the vote trading between nations indicated that the highly-paid, elective directorships of the $9,100,000,000 bank and $8,800,000,000 fund would go to the following countries:

Bank: Canada, Chile, Cuba, Netherlands, Belgium, Poland, Greece.

Fund: Canada, Mexico, Brazil, Netherlands, Belgium Czechoslovakia, Egypt.

The original list for the bank contained only one added starter—Norway. Any nation could submit nominations, but there was authoritative indication that Norway had named one of its citizens as an honorary matter.

Big Five Accorded Posts

The financial "Big Five," now consisting of the United States, Britain, China, France and India, are accorded automatic posts on the 12-man executive boards of the global agencies.

In this lineup only the positions of Greece on the bank and Egypt on the fund are open to question—barring a drastic shift in the lineup of voting strength as it stood tonight.

At stake in tomorrow's voting will be not only the direct control of the global agencies, but on an individual basis jobs that will outrank in salary any American official below President Truman. The governors approved late last night a scale, despite sharp British objection, that might vary for each individual but would net $17,000 a year, after the deduction of income taxes and other levies by the United States or whatever other nation might be concerned.

The executive directors, some of whom may serve in dual roles in the twin agencies, will later elect a managing director for the fund and a president for the bank—jobs paying $30,000 net after taxes.

These positions are now slated to go to the United States for the bank and Belgium—if Camille Gutt, minister of state will accept—for the fund.

Voting Complicated

Each member nation, now 38 in the bank and 37 in the fund, has been allotted 250 basic votes, plus one additional vote for each $100,000 subscribed to the fund and bank. The "Big Five" now hold 60,500 of the votes eligible to be cast in bank balloting, leaving 24,770 for other nations. The figures are slightly lower in the fund voting.

The "Big Five" are ineligible, however, in tomorrow's election, which will be concerned only with the seven elective directorships. Again the conditions differ, in that only five directors will actually be balloted on for the fund. The Bretton Woods agreements guarantee two posts to the Latin American nations, which have already decided among themselves that Mexico and Brazil should be selected.

House Fight With Anderson Due This Week

By the United Press

Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson faces his first fight with Congress this week when the House takes up a bill to remove $1,250,000,000 of lending powers from his department.

The bill, sponsored by Chairman John W. Flannagan, jr., of the House Agriculture Committee, would take all farm lending agencies from Anderson's jurisdiction and set them up in a new independent agency under a governing board.

In his committee's report, Flannagan said the measure would remove opportunities for political pressure and would prevent the department from using its lending powers as a club to force farmers to comply with distasteful programs.

He said specifically that no charges of politics or other improper actions were being made against Anderson, who, since he left the House for the Secretary's chair last summer, has been on good terms with his former colleagues. The measure, he added, was designed as a preventative.

Nevertheless, Anderson has publicly stated his opposition. He asserted that the department never had, and never will, exercise political or any other type of pressure on the farmers through its lending powers, and he holds that, being in close touch with farmers' needs, the department can serve them better if it handles their loans in conjunction with other services.

Among these is Representative Harold D. Cooley (D., N. C.), next to Flannagan in rank in the Agriculture Committee and author of a bill for a limited consolidation of farm lending agencies within the department.

Cooley said that Flannagan's bill is an "unwarranted indictment of the Democratic Administration" and is "predicated on the idea that the farm credit structure has been prostituted by politics."

In the Great Tradition

New Broadway Revue Recalls the Lush Era Of the Great 'Ziggy'

By Howard Barnes

New York, March 17

SOMETHING HAPPENED in the theater a week ago which may confuse contemporary audiences.

Stanley Gilkie and Barbara Payne produced a show at the Adelphia Theater called a revue. Not since "The Band Wagon" has this fragmentary form been so ably served as it is in "Three to Make Ready." Not since the aforementioned show opened on what was a dignified Forty-second Street has a musical show had the excitement, wit and color that you will find on Fifty-fourth Street.

Ray Bolger

Ray Bolger's superb job on "The Old Soft Shoe" is a number to recommend "Three to Make Ready" by itself.

The point is that this offering is in the great revue tradition, rather than being a hodge-podge of vaudeville acts.

A stripling reviewing confrere of mine asked me before the opening of "Three to Make Ready" what I thought about acrobats or a dog act. Obviously he knows no more about a revue than the average amusement seeker knows about the finer points of strip-teasing in this somewhat sacred metropolis.

Having witnessed a number of extended variety shows, fobbed off as revues during recent years, I understand his querulous attitude. It is easy enough to put a catch-all act in a show and make it look like a million dollars, but the lettuce is damp before one leaves the theater.

Fresh and Crisp

In the case of "Three to Make Ready," the lettuce is as crisp as it is for "Lute Song," that magnificent fantasy which you may find at the Martin Beck Theater. Here is a show which depends heavily on its star. Bolger combines comedy and terpischore as he has never done before to keep a thread of magnificent amusement in the offering. He can even take a scene which my erstwhile boss, Percy Hammond, so aptly defined as scatological and make it vaguely funny.

The sketches do not support him altogether, any more than they do Brenda Forbes, who is in there spelling him on more than one triumphant occasion. It happens that Miss Forbes is no more an acrobat or a leaping dog than W. C. Fields, when he distinguished an old-time revue called the "Ziegfeld Follies."

This, if I am not mistaken, is a time for all good men to rally around the theater. In such an indignant show as "Jeb," in such a contrived melodrama as "Little Jug," there has been, in retrospect, what can only be called waste motion. Both of these offerings deserved a far better fate than they were accorded. It may be that "Three to Make Ready" will go down that always open drain which confronts a theatrical production, but it will not be the less good.

For the new revue at the Adelphi is all that it pretends to be. Granted that it is lucky to have Bolger doing a tour-de-force as the particular clown and kicker-upper. It still sticks to a form which has made theatrical history and it sticks to it with genuine felicity.

There is no Bolger around when Miss Forbes gives with an Upper Montclair fellow-traveler in "The Russian Lesson." His angular grace is missing, too, from the sketch known as "The Story of the Opera." But "Three to Make Ready" is generally gay, altogether a revue and a definite delight.

Nancy Hamilton should be told, but not scolded, about her sketches. They are frequently attenuated, sometimes downright bad. At the same time, she has brought the theater back into full stature by daring to have the medium kid itself in the wonderful "Wisconsin" number, which I scarcely need to tell you is a lampoon on "Oklahoma!"

Not All Perfection

That she slips on occasion in making a sketch stand up is as understandable as the lad from N. Y. U. who dropped the stick when he might have won for his college. Satirical writing is not an easy task. To fill out a whole revue with pertinent and funny nonsense is too much to ask of any writer.

For my money, and I am thinking of the strange little quatrain that Miss Hamilton is going to dramatize even if she has to have a show called "Four to Go," the number three item on her program is altogether the best.

It is so appropriate to a revue that someof us old-timers thought that we were back in the golden, or punch-drunk era of the theater, when Jed Harris and Arthur Hopkins were reforming the drama and Ziegfeld and his acolytes were making dancing, singing and satire a blend of showmanship which was unmistakably wonderful.

In any case, "Three To Make Ready," for all its amateurish out-at-the-arms quality, is something to see—and see again.

New York, March 17.—One of Washington's most respected inhabitants, at whose home Mrs. Calvin Coolidge was a frequent visitor, told this story the other night. She admires Ed Pauley, and waited until after the battle for his confirmation was ended before telling an anecdote which might have hurt his chances. She heard the story from Mrs. Coolidge after the Teapot Dome scandal had broken . . . Mrs. Coolidge wanted to sell an antique mahogany table, and invited a dealer to come to the White House to discuss it. The dealer saw the President, and said: "I hear, sir, that you have an antique mahogany table for sale." . . . Coolidge replied: "I don't know anything about that—but I do have an oil-stained Cabinet I'd like to dispose of."

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

A GROUP of atomic scientists was being quizzed by Senator Joe O'Mahoney of Wyoming and Congresswoman Helen Gahagan Douglas of California at a private dinner. Leading scientist present was Dr. Leo Szilard, who discovered one method of creating the atom bomb.

The Senate Atomic Committee had just voted to set up a military board with broad powers over the scientists, and Senator O'Mahoney was anxious to get Dr. Szilard's ideas on Army control.

Szilard told several stories of how the Army, because it lacked scientific knowledge, hampered the scientists during the war. At one time, Dr. Szilard said, he came into his office and found that the bookcases had been turned round to face the wall. He asked the Army officer in charge why they had been moved and got this reply:

"There was a vial of uranium in your bookcase and orders are that nothing shall be revealed or exposed. So we turned the bookcases to the wall."

Dr. Szilard explained that many scientists were so apprehensive of the new Army control and the possibility, in talking to another scientist, of accidentally revealing something, that they wanted to get out of atomic science altogether.

"That would be a tragic mistake," advised Senator O'Mahoney. "You must not do that. Atomic experimentation must continue."

Dr. Szilard told about some of the amazing new fields which the atom had opened up, especially in medicine. For instance, it is now possible to put an atom in carbon, feed it into the human body, and follow it through the body. Thus, for the first time in history, the exact flow of matter through the body can be traced.

"But," remarked the noted scientist, "according to the bill just adopted by the Senate committee, all this will be under an Army board. And, from my previous experiences with the Army, such experiments will be very difficult in the future."

Congressional Tempers

REPRESENTATIVES Earl Michener of Michigan and Everett Dirksen of Illinois, both Republicans, are usually mild-mannered men. Both have served on the Joint Committee for the Reorganization of Congress, which proposed the plan of pensions for Congressmen. This is a ticklish question and tempers were high during the vote which finally defeated it.

When the House vote came up, Michigan's Michener voted in favor of the pension plan. Beside him, he heard Illinois' able Dirksen vote "Present," which means neither aye nor nay.

Dirksen saw red. Calling Michener an unpublishable name, he replied:

"Why, I've at least got the guts to vote the way I see things instead of ducking back and forth and bobbing up only when it's safe to make my position known. You always know where I stand on an issue just as soon as I do—but it's an awful tough job to figure out your position."

Michener was now fighting mad. He accused Dirksen of insulting him and insisted that Dirksen liked to duck issues. Several other members tried to calm them. Finally Dirksen, in a voice loud enough to be heard some distance across the House floor, said:

"All right, Earl, there's no sense in fighting in here. You come on outside with me to settle this, and I'll give you the thrashing you're asking for."

Dirksen, a man of heavyweight proportions, started up from his seat. But other members pulled him down, also held Michener down. The two glared at each other, but finally decided that discretion was the better part of valor.

Capital Chaff

TREASURY officials are worried over dwindling savings bonds sales. Savings stamps purchased in January and February of this year were about 10 per cent of the volume for January and February of last year—which means that the schools have let down sharply. Meanwhile, the House Appropriations Committee seems to want to cut the Treasury's savings bond staff to the bone and halfway through the bone . . . Ernie Adamson, letter-writing counsel for the House Un-American Activities Committee who doesn't like the idea of democracy, has been instructed by the committee that no more letters go out in the name of the committee unless approved by the chairman. This means Ernie was let down lightly . . . Jimmy Roosevelt has finally told California Congressmen he will not run for the Senate. He's also turned thumbs down on a proposal to run for a seat in the House of Representatives.

Merry-Go-Round

SECRETARY of the Treasury Vinson showed foreign delegates to the Monetary Conference what baseball is like, by arranging for the Brooklyn Dodgers to play an unscheduled exhibition game in Savannah, Ga. . . . Vinson is the Capital's most ardent baseball fan. . . . The War Department summoned Jimmy Doolittle back to Washington from terminal leave to keep him away from a civilian educational and church group conference on control of atomic energy. The astute Jimmy, however, checked on what the brass hats were up to, and then high-balled back to Florida to attend the atomic meeting anyhow. He has had Army run-arounds before. . . . One of the best current books on atomic control is, "One World—Or None," put out by McGraw-Hill, which explains atomic energy in words of one syllable. . . . President Truman may attend the "Inner Circle" dinner, March 30, entitled the "Shamrock and the Sickle," given by New York political writers to rib the left-wing Tammany Hall political alliance.

Kaiser Mediates

IT WAS an accidental dinner-table conservation by Henry Kaiser, which finally broke the strike of 100,000 General Electric workers, away from their machines for two long months.

Kaiser found himself seated next to General Electric President Charlie Wilson at a dinner and heard Wilson bemoaning his strike troubles, and how tough it was to get along with the CIO. Kaiser laughed, said he had no trouble at all, but had found Phil Murray easy to do business with.

Finally, Kaiser asked Wilson if he would mind sitting down and talking the matter over secretly with CIO General Counsel Lee Pressman in Kaiser's New York office. Wilson finally agreed. Next morning Pressman came to New York, talked with Wilson for four hours, and together they cleaned out the underbrush that had been blocking a settlement.

Kaiser sat through it all, nervous and perspiring. It was his first effort at mediating someone else's strike.

To clinch the agreement, Kaiser and Pressman arranged for Wilson to make a flying trip to Florida, sign the final deal with Murray. That's how 100,000 more men went back to the production line.

Note—General Electric's Charles E. Wilson is frequently confused with General Motors' Charles E. Wilson. Both had long strikes on their hands. Both strikes ended the same day.

2 Newsmen Hit Congress in WINX Talk

Congress not only has failed to do the job the Nation needs done, but it has also mangled or deadlocked the President's postwar program.

These charges were made in a radio broadcast over station WINX yesterday by two newsmen who regularly cover Capitol Hill.

Nathan Robertson of the Washington staff of the newspaper PM, and G. W. (Pete) Stewart, financial writer for Newsweek magazine, both pointed to congressional shortcomings during the program "Is Congress Doing Its Job?" Ed Hart, radio commentator, was moderator.

Robertson remarked that economic problems now faced are even bigger than those of 1933. If Congress had responded to leadership of the President in 1933 in the same way it now is behaving the country "would never have emerged from the depression," he asserted.

Stewart said early tax relief granted turned out "to be not so urgently needed as most people thought." Most recent tax reduction "was a little overdone," according to the financial analyst.

The problem of keeping men and machines busy after the war, to meet the "long pull ahead" brought forth President Truman's "gigantic legislative program," Robertson said, adding that "Congress had hardly touched" this program.

"One or two measures have been passed in mangled form," Robertson declared. ". . . most of them are deadlocked or dead."

Both writers tended to agree that a considerable turnover in membership of Congress would result if "the people were aware" of how those up for reelection voted on important issues.

Many Reds Quit Reich

New York, March 17.—The Bern radio tonight said it was reported 75 per cent of the Russian troops in eastern Germany "have been withdrawn" and the remainder is expected to leave "within a few weeks" when a civilian police force will take over their dutiies.

W. CAMERON BURTON and WARD B. McCARTHY, 1005 Investment Building, Washington 5, D. C., Attorneys for Cavestor.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. In re: Estate of Mary Sherburne, deceased. Adm. No. 65297. ORDER FIXING NEW DATA FOR TRIAL AND PROVIDING FOR PUBLICATION. The notification as to the trial of the issues in this case relating to the validity of the paper writing dated the 7th day of March, 1945, purporting to be the last Will and Testament of Mary Sherburne, deceased and a paper writing dated the ——— day of March, 1945, purporting to be the first Codicil to the Last Will and Testament of Mary Sherburne, deceased, having been returned as to Lucy Kish, Matilda Norwood, Frank D. Norwood, Thomas Edward McCarthy, Nellie McCarthy, City Cemetery of Bolivar, Missouri, Allen Sherbourne, Lucille Oresson and Henry T. Butler, "Not to be found," it is, by the Court, this 28th day of February, 1946, ORDERED: That said issues be set down for trial on the 6TH DAY OF MAY, 1946, and that this order and the substance of said issues be published once a week for four successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and twice a week for the same period in The Washington Post, the substance of said issues being as follows: Was the paper writing of March 7, 1945, the Last Will and Testament of Mary Sherburne, deceased, and was the paper writing of March ——, 1945, the first Codicil thereto; was Mary Sherburne at the time of making subscribing and acknowledging said papers, or either of them, of a sound and disposing mind and capable of executing a valid will or contract; were the said papers, or either of them, obtained or the execution or subscription thereof procured from Mary Sherburne by fraud or deceit or by undue influence or duress or coercion; was the paper writing of March ——, 1945, executed and attested in due form as required by law? ALEXANDER HOLTZOFF, Justice. A true copy. Attest: THOMAS A. SCALLEY, Deputy Register of Wills for the District of Columbia, Clerk of the Probate Court. 4,9,11,16,18,23,25,30

GOVERNMENT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, March 12, 1946.—A public hearing having been held by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain street area and public alleys in the District of Columbia, hereinafter described, and as the said Commissioners are of the opinion that the street area and alleys referred to should be closed, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that by order date of March 7, 1946, they have prepared the following order: "ORDERED: That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street and alley areas as shown in green on plats filed in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia and numbered as Maps 3170, 3171 and 3172 are hereby ordered CLOSED, same to take effect on and after APRIL 15, 1946; the title to the land comprised in the areas so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps; the closings to take effect jointly, or separately, by subsequent order or orders, on the effective date aforesaid, according to Items 1, 2 and 3, described as follows: 1. Closing part of Taylor Street abutting Parcels 147/127 and 147/163, located west of South Dakota Avenue, N.E. 2. Closing of alley, 10 feet wide, running northerly from Reservoir Street, N.W., in Square 1280. 3. Closing part of the public alley, 15 feet wide, running westerly from 2nd Street, S.E., in the northerly part of Square 6093." Any and all parties interested must file in writing with the Commissioners, D. C., objections, if any, to these closings, or as to any item providing for the closings listed above, before April 15, 1946, otherwise said closings shall become effective on and after that date, in accordance with the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932. JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, GUY MASON, GORDON R. YOUNG, Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Bids and Proposals 6

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE, UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE, Washington, D. C., March 18, 1946.—Sealed proposals (in triplicate) will be received at this office until 10 a. m., Friday, March 29, 1946, and will be opened immediately thereafter, in the presence of such bidders as attend, for producing in the city of Washington, District of Columbia, during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, copies of drawings of pending applications and patents, trade-mark applications, and of foreign patents, papers, and exhibits by photographic or other process. The prices named will be considered in connection with the ability of the bidder and his plant to do and deliver within a specified time first-class work, and, prior to the determination of an award, such preliminary investigation as to the qualifications of bidders and efficiency of plant will be made as the Department shall deem necessary. A low bid, unsupported by satisfactory evidence as to ability to perform the work in agreement with the terms of the proposals and contract to be awarded, will be rejected. All bids accepted and contracts awarded subject to an appropriation by Congress to meet the expense. Lack of commercial standing on the part of the bidder or inadequate facilities or plant with which to perform the work specified will constitute good and sufficient ground for the rejection of such a bid. BIDDERS WHOSE WORK HAS BEEN UNSATISFACTORY IN THE PAST OR BIDDERS WHO ARE NOT COMPLYING WITH THE PROVISIONS OF THE WALSH-HEALEY ACT, PUBLIC 846, OF THE 74TH CONGRESS, OR WHO ARE NOT COMPLYING WITH THE MINIMUM WORK WEEK PRESCRIBED BY EXECUTIVE ORDER NO. 9301, DATED FEBRUARY 9, 1943, MAY BE ELIMINATED FROM CONSIDERATION ON THAT GROUND. Specifications and specimens with forms of proposal, will be furnished on application to the Chief Clerk of the Patent Office. All bidders are invited to be present at the opening. The right to reject any and all bids, in whole or in part, is hereby reserved. All plates used in color work or halftone work to be the property of the Patent Office. The number of colors used in the color work to be in accordance with the drawings as furnished. Work of current issue (Class A) to be performed in the District of Columbia. CASPER W. OOMS, Commissioner.

DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE, UNITED STATES PATENT OFFICE, Washington, D. C., March 18, 1946.—Sealed proposals (in triplicate) will be received at this office until 10 a. m., Friday, March 29, 1946, and will be opened immediately thereafter, in the presence of such bidders as attend, for producing during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947, by photolithographic or other process, copies of drawings of the weekly issues of patents; and for the reproduction of exhausted copies of drawings and specifications, etc., by photolithographing. The prices named will be considered in connection with the ability of the bidder and his plant to do and deliver within a specific time, first-class work, under the conditions above, except that no specific number of pages can be estimated for producing or reproducing copies of drawings of patents on plants. Under these same conditions, producing by halftone process, copies of drawings of patents on plants. Prior to the determination of an award, such preliminary investigation as to the qualification of bidders and efficiency of plant will be made as the Department shall deem necessary. A low bid, unsupported by satisfactory evidence as to ability to perform the work in agreement with the terms of the proposals and contract to be awarded, will be rejected. TERRY

I WONDER THAT YOU TWO HAVE NOT BEEN SHOT DOWN LONG SINCE—IF YOU STARE AT EVERY WOMAN THIS WAY!
BUT, MASTER, EVERY WOMAN IS NOT THE DRAGON LADY!
FOR WHICH THERE SHOULD DOUBTLESS BE REJOICING IN THE STREETS—BUT GET ON WITH YOUR REPORT ON LIEUT. TERENCE LEE...
LIEUT. LEE LEFT THE U.S. MILITARY HOSPITAL AND ARRIVED HERE... BY TRAIN... HE INQUIRED THE WAY TO THE OFFICE OF MILITARY INTELLIGENCE!
HE IS THERE AT THIS MOMENT
SO! SINCE TERRY'S POINT OF ENLISTMENT WAS CHINA, THE PATTERN OF EVENTS TAKES A LOGICAL FORM... THE DRAGON LADY IS PLEASED...
MEANWHILE....
SIR, IT'S HARD TO BELIEVE THAT THE OH-SO-SECRET PACKET I CARRIED CONTAINED ONLY MY OWN ARMY RECORD!
WE NEEDED A SIMPLE CODE DEVICE WITH WHICH TO IDENTIFY YOU... OTHERWISE YOU MIGHT NOT HAVE LIVED TO RISK YOUR NECK FOR THIS DEPARTMENT!

JOE PALOOKA

THE SPORTS WRITERS OF AMERICA'S LEADING PAPERS ARE STAYING AT THE RONEY IN MIAMI BEACH AND BOCA RATON TO BE NEAR BOTH DILL'S AND PALOOKA'S CAMPS. THE EXPENSES ARE 'ON THE CUFF'
WHAT A LAYOUT! THIS IS PARADISE. I'M GLAD I NEVER BECAME A DRAMA CRITIC OR CITY EDITOR.
MIKES MORE PRODIGAL THAN TEX RICKARD WAS. THIS MUST BE COSTING HIM A FORTUNE!
SO WHAT? IT COMES OFF THE TAXES!
HEY YOU GUYS, HOW ABOUT SOME COPY?
HOW ARE YOU GOING TO TREAT THAT FIRE AT PALOOKA'S CAMP?
NOT MUCH OF A STORY. JUST AN ACCIDENT. DIDN'T CONCERN JOE SO THERE'S NO ANGLE.
I WONDER WHY TINY QUIT?
SAY, DAN, I GOT A DATE WITH A BABE THIS AFTERNOON. GIMME SOMETHING FROM DILL'S CAMP FOR A YARN.

MARY WORTH

IN THE DARCY BASEMENT THIS MORNING, A CLATTERING TONGUE COMPETES WITH THE HUM OF THE WASHER!
WHY, WHAT DO YOU MEAN, MRS. TIMMONS?
TOO BAD ABOUT TH' HARDY'S NEXT DOOR, AIN'T IT, MRS. DARCY?
LAST NIGHT MY HUSBAND, THE NIGHT WATCHMAN, SEEN MISTER HARDY CLIMB IN A WINDOW! SEEMS LIKE SHE HAD LOCKED HIM OUT!
THEN THEY HAD IT! HOT N' HEAVY! SHE SAYS: "I'LL SEE YA IN COURT!"...TSK! TSK! THEM LOVEY-DOVEY COUPLES HAS PLENTY O' SPATS!
YOU SHOULDN'T BE SPREADING SUCH STORIES AROUND, MRS. TIMMONS!...
NOW, DON'T YOU FRET!--I'VE WARNED EVER'BODY I TOLD IT TO NOT TO REPEAT IT!
5-15-46

MYRTLE

SAMPSON, I'LL GIVE YOU A DIME IF YOU FIX OUR DOORBELL!
WOULD YOU CARE TO PAY IN ADVANCE?
NO! I WON'T PAY YOU UNTIL I HEAR IT RING!
COME OUT IN FIVE MINUTES
RING
RING
COULD YOU GIVE ME TWO NICKELS?
I HAVE TO SPLIT WITH MY SOUND EFFECTS MAN!
RING

MICKEY FINN

PHIL IS SITTING ON TOP OF THE WORLD AGAIN—HIS PART IN THE PASSING OF "SWAMP TOWN" HAS BEEN MADE KNOWN TO ALL.
THERE'LL BE NO HOLDING HIM, NOW, CLANCY!
WELL, IF HE THINKS IT'S GONNA GET HIM ELECTED MAYOR, HE'S CRAZY!
I DON'T KNOW ABOUT THAT, HOULIHAN! THE PUBLIC DOES FUNNY THINGS!
YEAH! BUT NOT THAT FUNNY!
YOU NEVER CAN TELL, HOULIHAN! THOUSANDS OF PEOPLE ARE GONNA BE MIGHTY GRATEFUL THAT "SWAMP TOWN" IS GONNA GO!
HERE'S SOME MORE, UNCLE PHIL!
BY GOLLY—I THINK I'LL HAVE TO GET A SECRETARY!

DIXIE DUGAN

PATSY—THIS IS IMPORTANT—DID YOU RUN AWAY FROM HOME BECAUSE YOUR FATHER IS MEAN TO YOU?
THAT'S THE BIGGEST REASON, AUNTIE—
OF COURSE WANTING TO GET ON THE NEW YORK STAGE WAS THE OTHER REASON
I SEE—A COMBINATION OF BOTH—YOUR FATHER PROBABLY HATES THE THEATRE
HE'S PROBABLY A FRUSTRATED ACTOR—HE FAILED AND RESENTS YOUR ENTHUSIASM
AND WHAT ABOUT YOUR MOTHER?
OH, SOB, POOR, POOR MOTHER—

CHIEF WAHOO and STEVE ROPER

YOU'RE MAD, MR. VON BROOT! COMPLETELY INSANE!
NOT AT ALL, MISS KARSON!--WHERE SOME DOLTS COLLECT STAMPS--OR OLD FURNITURE ---I COLLECT ANCIENT TORTURE DEVICES!
AND I PROPOSE TO TEST THEM ON MR. ROPER!--- HERE IS ONE USED IN MADRID IN 1589--- SHALL I ROCK HIM TO PERPETUAL SLEEP IN THE "SPANISH CRADLE"--?
--OR FIT HIM FIRST WITH THESE HEATED IRON GLOVES?

WINNIE WINKLE

OH, MR. ADAMS, CAN I BE THE COVER GIRL ON THE NEXT ISSUE
THE HECK YOU ARE! I'M GONNA BE NEXT--AREN'T I, MR. ADAMS?
--AND WE'LL HAVE A BOARD OF JUDGES PICK A DIFFERENT PIN-UP GIRL FOR THE COVER OF EACH ISSUE!!
OH!
WELL--I'LL BE NEXT!
TH' HECK YA WILL! I'LL BE NEXT!!

KING OF THE ROYAL MOUNTED

BY TIMING AN EXPLOSION AT THE OPPOSITE END OF TOWN, THE "DOMINO" BANDIT DECOYS KING AWAY FROM THE REAL CRIME!
HMM! THIS IS A TOUGH WAY TO BE CROSSED OFF THE LIST OF SUSPECTS!
THE "DOMINO" WANTED TO SMASH THE PLASTER CASTS I MADE OF HIS FOOTPRINTS...
--BAD ENOUGH TO COMMIT MURDER! BUT HE DIDN'T FORGET TO LEAVE HIS TRADE-MARK... THIS TIME DOMINO NUMBER THREE!
BY JOVE! I PUT OL' PEG TO WATCHING THIS PLACE. MAYBE HE SAW THE KILLER!

DONALD DUCK

BUT IN THIS RAIN YOU'LL HAVE TROUBLE SEEING THE GAME!
ALL THE BETTER! A GOOD SPORTSMAN LIKES T' GIVE HIS QUARRY A CHANCE!
BESIDES, YOU'LL GET SOAKING WET!
NOT ME! I'M TAKIN' AN UMBRELLA!

CRANBERRY BOGGS

NOW THAT DINNER IS OVER, I CAN SETTLE MY SCORE WITH BOGGS. ONLY HE COULD HAVE SLIPPED ME THAT BROKEN CHAIR.
BUT JEFF OLD CHAP--FISTICUFFS! REALLY.
EVER SINCE I HIT THIS TOWN I'VE HAD MY EYES ON KANDY. BUT SHE'S FOCUSED ON CRAN.
SO WHAT DO I DO?--GIVE A FANCY PARTY TO MAKE CRAN LOOK SILLY. AND I--NOT CRAN --END UP BEHIND THE EIGHT BALL.
B-BUT--
"B-BUT", MY TOENAILS! MAYBE I'M SUNK WITH KANDY KANE BUT AT LEAST CRAN IS GOING TO KNOW HOW I FEEL---- STRAIGHT FROM THE SHOULDER!

DOTTY

OH, YOU WANT TO GO OUTSIDE?
WELL GO AHEAD--DON'T YOU WANT TO GO OUT?!!
OH, HE WANTS YOU TO GO OUTSIDE, DEAR-- HE DOESN'T LIKE THE SMELL OF YOUR PIPE!

PENNY

ISN'T IT SIMPLY GORGEOUS OUT, FATHER? IT'S ONE OF THOSE EVENINGS WHEN ONE'S HEART JUST SWELLS WITH GOOD WILL FOR SIMPLY EVERY-BODY.
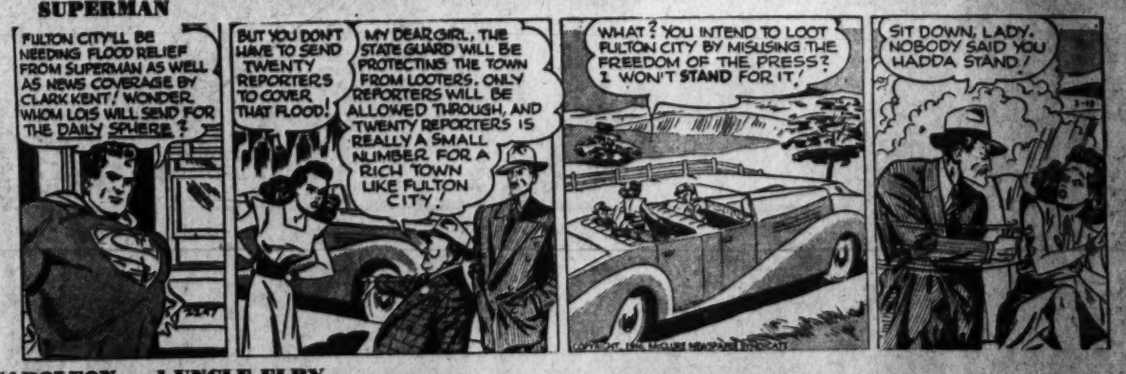
A-UH... LITTLE NOTE.
SO YOU'RE IN ANOTHER JAM. I'LL HAVE TO GO SEE THE PRINCIPAL AGAIN, I SUPPOSE.
WELL, IT IS ABOUT CUTTING UP IN GYM, BUT YOU DON'T HAVE TO BOTHER GOING TO SEE HIM.
NO?
NO, HE'S DEFINITELY COMING TO SEE YOU!

SUPERMAN



FULTON CITY'LL BE NEEDING FLOOD RELIEF FROM SUPERMAN AS WELL AS NEWS COVERAGE BY CLARK KENT! WONDER WHOM LOIS WILL SEND FOR THE DAILY SPHERE?
BUT YOU DON'T HAVE TO SEND TWENTY REPORTERS TO COVER THAT FLOOD!
MY DEAR GIRL, THE STATE GUARD WILL BE PROTECTING THE TOWN FROM LOOTERS. ONLY REPORTERS WILL BE ALLOWED THROUGH, AND TWENTY REPORTERS IS REALLY A SMALL NUMBER FOR A RICH TOWN LIKE FULTON CITY!
WHAT? YOU INTEND TO LOOT FULTON CITY BY MISUSING THE FREEDOM OF THE PRESS? I WON'T STAND FOR IT!
SIT DOWN, LADY. NOBODY SAID YOU HADDA STAND!

NAPOLEON and UNCLE ELBY

CHEER UP FELLOWS. WE DID OUR BEST TO FIND TH' THOUSAND DOLLAR FOSSIL 'BONE AND WIN TH' REWARD. IT ISN'T OUR FAULT PROF. HUMMINGBIRD GOT TH' BONE WITHOUT OUR HELP- BUT NOW WE DON'T GET OUR NEW CLUB HOUSE.
